U.N. SECRETARY MEETS ISRAELIS, SNAG REPORTED ON BUFFER ZONE

Jewish Leaders Said to Favor Narrow Strip While Egyptians Want Much Wider No-Man's-Land.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JERUSALEM, Israel Sector, April 17—United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld arrived here by plane today on his peace mission in the Middle East and immediately began talks with Israeli leaders.

He conferred with Prime Minister Ben-Gurion, Foreign Minister Moshe Sharet and Walter Eytan, director-general of the Foreign Office. Sharet met Hammarskjöld and Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, U.N. truce supervisor, when they landed at Lydda airport from Beirut, Lebanon, and accompanied them into Jerusalem.

The Secretary General posed briefly with Sharet for photographers but declined to talk with newspaper correspondents who met the plane.

U.N. Secretary Silent.

"He seldom says anything when he negotiates, never," the newspaper men were told by the U.N. information officer George Ivan Smith, who is accompanying Hammarskjöld on his on-the-spot investigation of the Middle East crisis.

Meanwhile, the Post-Dispatch learned some details of an impasse that confronts Hammarskjöld in his effort to accomplish the most urgent part of his mission—to arrange an effective ceasefire along the explosive frontier between Israel and the Egyptian-held Gaza strip.

Israeli leaders are prepared to press for creation of a narrow physical barrier along the armistice demarcation line, which now is partly unmarked and partly delineated only by stone cairns and mortar positions.

They want to mark the line with parallel barbed wire fences about 100 yards apart, with the space between heavily mined. Watch towers on each side would provide additional protection against infiltration.

Counter Measure.

This proposal is being offered to counter Egyptian pressure for a much wider no-man's-land. This would be created by withdrawal of all forces for one kilometer (.62 miles) on each side.

Efforts to learn exactly what objection Israel has to the Egyptian proposal have disclosed the explanation that a wide strip of no-man's-land would tend to open the border rather than close it. It was contended that Arab infiltrators could roam at will in such a corridor and await their chance to slip across into Israel on marauding expeditions.

"After all, wasn't it an Egyptian proposal?" a Foreign Office official asked. "They want a no-man's-land because they know it would make infiltration easier instead of harder."

Another reason Egypt wants a withdrawal of forces and Israel is countering with its proposal of a physical barrier has been emphasized by neither side but is probably the controlling factor.

This unmentioned issue controls the nature of the Israeli settlements that are strung along the border of the Gaza strip, many of them within rifle shot of the frontier.

Defense Settlements.

These communal settlements, called kibbutzim, are an integral part of the Israeli defense forces. They were founded as a means of holding Israeli territory all the way to the armistice line where the 1948 war ended. The settlers are mainly young and vigorous men and women, many of them native born Palestinians. They know how to use Sten guns and keep them handy.

If Israeli had to draw back its forces any substantial distance, many of these settlements would be left, if not in no-man's-land, at least in great jeopardy of enemy attack—a possibility that even now is uncomfortably close.

By the United Press.

Ben-Gurion was reported to have ruled out a limited settlement. In a declaration which observers said reduced Hammarskjöld's chances of easing tension in the Middle East, Ben-Gurion was reported by reliable sources to have said "all differences between Israel and Egypt must be cleared up and satisfactorily settled." However, Ben-Gurion was said to have assured Hammarskjöld that Israel would refrain from any attacks on Egypt "provided Egypt does likewise."

End of Ship Bar Sought.

Ben-Gurion asked Hammarskjöld to seek an end to the Egyptian bar on Israeli ships in the Suez Canal. Hammarskjöld feels that the blockade in outside the instructions given him by the U.N. for his peace mission. Ben-Gurion called the bar a "flagrant violation of the armistice agreement," sources said.

The U.N. Security Council on Sept. 1, 1951, called on Egypt to end all restrictions on international commercial shipping.

Despite the Security Council resolution, Egypt has continued to bar Israeli ships from the Suez canal. In March 1954, a Western resolution reaffirming it was vetoed by the Soviet Union.

The Security Council took no action when Israel brought up the matter again later in the year. However, Egypt is now allowing non-Israeli ships with

New Starfighter Jet Is Flown At More Than 1000 M.P.H.

Overhead view shows unusual design features of the new Lockheed XF-104 Starfighter, in flight above the California desert. The short, sharp-edged anhedral wings, set well back in the long fuselage, have long range fuel tanks at the tips. Production model of the plane, the F-140A, is said to be the Air Force's fastest fighter.

F-104A Given First Public Showing—Stubby Wings Make It Resemble Missile—Exact Speed Secret.

PALMDALE, Calif., April 17 (AP)—The Lockheed F-104A Starfighter was flown at more than 1000 miles an hour before several hundred persons, including news writers, yesterday.

It was the first public showing of the new craft which Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff, has called "the fastest and highest flying fighter anywhere in the sky."

The exact speed of the plane remained a secret. Actually two models were flown—the original XF-104, which was powered by a Curtiss-Wright J65 jet engine, and the production model F-104A, which has a lighter and more powerful engine, the General Electric J79 (which the United Press said developed 60,000 horsepower).

Twice 500 M.P.H.

Although the speeds attained were not disclosed, the pilot of an F-94C jet fighter reported he was flying 500 miles an hour, and the F-104A pilot, Herman R. (Fish) Salmon, was heard to reply over his radio, "I am doing better than twice that fast."

The United Press said the plane weighed about 13,000 pounds, less than half the weight of most modern fighters, and was built for a top speed of 1320 to 1400 miles an hour. It can fly above 50,000 feet and climbs at a rate of about 40,000 feet in one minute.

The plane was given a Hollywood type unveiling, with a gold curtain concealing part of a hangar rolling back to disclose the gleaming, spotlighted plane. Robert E. Gross, Lockheed Aircraft Corp. president, told the gathering that the F-104 was "the champion in the fighter field—the finest fighter in the world."

Gen. Otto P. Weyland, commander of the Tactical Air Command, announced that his command would be the first to receive the new fighter, and the cargoes consigned to Israel to pass through the canal. No new incidents were reported between Israel and Egypt today but several complaints were made by both sides yesterday.

Israel charged sabotage at the Ramle cement works near Tel Aviv and an Egyptian military spokesman accused the Israelis of opening fire at Gaza eight times on the Gaza strip in the last two days.

Greece to Permit Flight of Czech Planes Bound for Egypt.

ATHENS, April 17 (AP)—The Greek Government has granted permission for an unspecified number of military aircraft of Czechoslovak make, bearing Egyptian markings to fly over Greece on their way to Egypt. Athens press reports said today.

Similar permission has been granted aircraft of French manufacture bearing Israeli markings bound for Israel, the reports added.

Permission was refused for a number of civilian aircraft of Russian make and markings to fly over Greece to Egypt, the reports added.

SECRET SESSION ON TACTICS HELD BY JOINT CHIEFS

Pentagon Announces Shift in Long-Range Global Strategy After Special Talks.

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—The Joint Chiefs of Staff met yesterday in a special session which high officials said was called to consider possible shifts in United States global strategy.

As usual, their deliberations were secret.

The tipoff that an extraordinary meeting of the joint chiefs was under way came when the Pentagon announced revision of longmade plans by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, and Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations.

A Pentagon spokesman acknowledged that this was not the regular day for the weekly meeting of the chiefs. He said the matters that came up were "so important that each service had to be represented by its top man and not by a deputy."

Last week the Army announced that Taylor would leave for an inspection trip to Europe last Saturday.

Yesterday the Army said the "press of official work" had prevented him from leaving on schedule and that he planned to depart later this week.

Burke had long been scheduled to receive the chief of the Swedish navy in his office yesterday. The meeting between Burke and V. Adm. Stig Hansson Ericson was postponed because Burke sent word from the joint chiefs' conference room that he would be unable to keep the appointment as scheduled.

The chiefs went into session shortly after lunch and broke up a little before 6 p.m.

MCCARTHY GIVES SENATE GROUP DOCUMENTS ON CIA

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—Senator McCarthy (Rep., Wis.), said yesterday he had turned over to the Senate Internal Security subcommittee "50 or more documents having to do with everything from incompetence to Communists" in the Central Intelligence Agency.

He told the Senate he had planned to give the material to a Senate-House watchdog committee on the CIA if its creation had been approved by Congress. The Senate rejected the proposal last week.

McCarthy said he decided the Internal Security subcommittee had "the most complete jurisdiction" so he had turned over the documents to Chairman Eastland (Dem., Miss.).

2. The application of "boundary layer control," by "bleeding" air over the wing surface on take-offs and landings to reduce turbulence and give added lift.

The audience was warned there would be a sonic boom when the plane passed through the so-called sound barrier at around 760 miles an hour.

"Because the plane is so light and sleek, it will be a lady finger type of sonic boom," it was explained. True to the promise, the plane produced a sharp but not overly loud report as it accelerated through the barrier in a low-level speed run at this desert test center.

The F-104 was one of the three planes put into speeded production last year after Russia's May day air power display. The experimental model flew in February 1954, and the first production model two years later. Both were demonstrated here.

NEW JERSEY VOTING TODAY IN STATE PRIMARY

Kefauver Battling Democratic Organization—Eisenhower Alone on Ballot.

NEWARK, N.J., April 17 (AP)—New Jersey voted today in a primary election that found Senator Estes Kefauver in a familiar position—fighting the state Democratic organization.

This was the third such contest for him in little more than a month.

In New Hampshire and Minnesota, he defeated state organizations which were backing Adlai Stevenson for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Kefauver closed his new Jersey campaign with the prediction, "We will win all over the state."

Today's election is not a direct test between the Tennessee Senator and Stevenson.

Kefauver's 72 delegate-candidates oppose a slate headed by Gov. Robert B. Meyner. The Governor says he personally is neutral, and that his delegation would go to the convention uncommitted.

Kefauver also is on that section of the ballot known as the "popularity contest," where the voters register their preferences for President.

President Eisenhower's name is alone on the Republican ballot.

New Jersey voters cannot cross party lines without two years' notice, so today's preferential ballot does not provide a direct test between Kefauver and the President.

Stevenson's supporters in the state did not attempt to organize a write-in campaign on his behalf.

The polls opened at 7 a.m. and were to remain open until 8 p.m. All of the heavily-populated counties, and many rural communities use voting machines. Fewer than a third of the state's 2,600,000 registered voters were expected to cast ballots.

The voting was light despite fair weather.

The Democrats were electing 72 delegates to the national convention, each with a half-vote. The Republican slate included 38 candidates, each with a full vote and all for Mr. Eisenhower, plus four conservative Republicans who are uncommitted.

Kefauver spent six days campaigning in New Jersey. He drew fair-sized crowds, both in formal meetings indoors and when he went hand-shaking on the streets.

He talked issues at the meetings, but he also attacked "bossism." Giving Gov. Meyner the New Jersey convention delegates, he said, amounts to giving the governor a "blank proxy."

G.O.P. Leaders Ask Democrats To Support Soil Bank Proposal

Opposition Reacts Coldly to President's Plan—Midwest Republicans Express Dissatisfaction With Veto.

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)

—Republican congressional leaders called on the Democrats today to rally behind President Eisenhower's new soil bank proposal if they really want to help the American farmer.

The G.O.P. leadership issued this call at a White House news conference following their weekly meeting with the President. Key Democrats in Congress were reacting coldly to the Eisenhower proposal and there was some evidence of Republican dissatisfaction.

G.O.P. Senate leader Knowland and House Republican leader Martin forecast that the President's veto of the Democratic-sponsored farm bill will be upheld by substantial margins.

Martin said he sees "a bare possibility" a majority of House members will back the President's stand in a vote scheduled tomorrow.

Knowland said the Senate could pass a soil bank bill, as the President requested in his veto message, within a week or two, but he said the House could do so in a single day.

The G.O.P. Senate leader said he thinks many Democrats will back the President's proposal once the "temporary flurry" over the veto has passed.

"I can't believe that purely for political purposes they would now turn around and oppose something they have already approved," Knowland said.

Difficultly Expected.

After a Republican campaign conference yesterday, George F. Etzell, Minnesota national committeeman, told reporters the veto "is going to make it harder for us to elect Republicans in the Midwest."

This was disputed by National Chairman Leonard W. Hall, who contended that the President's action "will help the Republican party."

Mr. Eisenhower will speak at a final conference session tonight—in effect formally opening his re-election campaign.

A committee headed by Etzell heard at closed sessions yesterday what some members called unfavorable reports about the political complexion of the farm situation from Kansas and South Dakota.

The committee arranged to hear today from representatives of Colorado, North Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska.

Kansas National Committeeman Harry Darby was reported to have told the group Kansas may turn out some Republican congressmen because of farm price dissatisfaction. The South Dakota delegation, headed by Senators Francis Case and Karl Mundt, was said to have made it clear they don't want Secretary of Agriculture Benson campaigning in their states.

Hall said the farm bill veto "won't make my job any tougher," but he indicated rather clearly the Republicans hope to make up in the big cities any votes they might lose in farm areas.

"To my mind, the Republican party is doing all right in the cities," Hall said.

This seemed to be an allusion to a contention voiced by Robert Humphreys, G.O.P. national committee campaign director, that in primaries so far this year the Republicans have shown unusual strength in the larger cities.

Humphreys said this was true in Milwaukee. He conceded that no such trend was evident in Chicago.

Hall's Comment.

Hall said the Democrats in Congress had "stalled" action on farm legislation. He intimated they deliberately sent Mr. Eisenhower a bill they hoped he would veto.

"The President was absolutely right in vetoing the farm bill and he will be sustained by the American people," Hall said.

He said the farm situation "is not as I would like it," but that he did not think it would cost the Republicans any states in the November presidential election.

"In my opinion the veto will help the Republican party," he said. He added he thinks Mr. Eisenhower's proposal for new soil bank legislation—which Congress may not pass—and for price support increases "will take care of the economic picture quite well" in the farm areas.

Dissent to the veto action appeared to be limited among the Republicans to states in the Midwest tier which depend largely on one crop. G.O.P. workers from states where diversified farming is the rule voiced no public complaints.

Ahead of Schedule.

Humphreys told a press conference the Republicans this year are six months ahead of their 1952 schedule in preparing for the elections.

He said William Warner, director of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, reported there are 94 congressional seats that the Republicans have a chance of picking up in the general election.

Warner said these include 31 seats the Democrats won with a margin of 5 per cent of the vote in 1954 plus 63 seats now held by Democrats in districts Mr. Eisenhower carried in 1952.

Humphreys said both Warner and Victor A. Johnston, staff director for the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, were optimistic about regained control of Congress.

"The emphasis is on the fact that our big job is to win Congress, but that doesn't mean we are taking anything for granted in the presidential contest," Humphreys said.

SHARP SETBACK FOR CIVIL RIGHTS BILLS IN HOUSE

Judiciary Group Votes 14 to 13 to Send Measures Back to Subcommittee.

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)

—Civil rights legislation got a sharp setback today when the House Judiciary Committee voted 14 to 13 to send it back to a subcommittee for further study.

Southern members provided most of the votes for the motion which applied both to President Eisenhower's proposals and to a bill introduced by Chairman Celler (Dem., New York).

Celler and Representative Keating of New York, senior Republican member, predicted the committee would get a bill to the House floor. But Representative Willis (Dem., Louisiana), who made the motion to send the bills back for further study, said, "They'll have a fight on their hands."

Attorney General Brownell sent Congress the Administration's program last week. It calls for creation of a civil rights commission and a special division in the Justice Department to handle protection of civil rights. He also asked authority to proceed by civil suits against violations of voting and other rights.

Celler's bill has some similar provisions plus specific provisions against segregation in interstate transportation. It also aims at a tightening of criminal statutes.

$60,000,000 JET CONTRACT SIGNED BY U.S. AND JAPAN

TOKYO, April 17 (AP)—Japan and the United States today signed a $60,000,000 contract to build F-86 Sabre jets and T-33 jet trainers in Japan.

The cost will be shared on an approximate 50-50 basis under the Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement.

An American spokesman said the contract provides for construction of approximately 110 Sabre jets and 80 trainers. This is an addition to last June's agreement providing for construction of 70 Sabre jets and 100 trainers. All of the planes will go to Japan's new air arm.

PLAN FOR USING IDLE STATE CASH BEFORE SENATE FOR FINAL ACTION

Amended Proposal for Amendment Allows
Investment in Time
Deposits or U.S. Securities.

By EDWARD H. THORNTON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 17—A proposal for a constitutional amendment which would require investment of surplus state funds either in interest-bearing time deposits or in Government securities maturing in not more than one year, was awaiting final passage in the Senate today.

The overwhelming voice vote by which the measure was perfected for passage in the Senate last night seemed to indicate it would have clear sailing when it comes to a vote—probably tomorrow.

As perfected by the Senate after a three-hour debate, the proposal differs greatly from the measure recommended two weeks ago by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly.

Governor's Proposal.
In a special message he urged submission to the voters of a constitutional amendment which would "permit" the State Treasurer to place not more than 50 per cent of state funds on time deposit, bearing interest. No mention was made in the Governor's proposal of investment in Government securities.

The proposal was amended in the Senate to make it mandatory that surplus state funds be invested by the State Treasurer. The 50 per cent limitation was removed and the Treasurer would be permitted to invest the funds either in short-term Government obligations, or to place them on time deposit, with banking institutions in the state selected by him with the approval of the Governor and State Auditor.

Amendment and Substitute.
When Senator Floyd R. Gibson (Dem.), Independence, majority floor leader, called the proposal up for consideration, he offered an amendment which would have removed the 50 per cent limitation on investment of idle funds, but would have gone no further.

Senator Albert M. Spradling Jr. (Dem.), Cape Girardeau, immediately submitted a substitute amendment which finally was adopted after some changes were made.

As originally proposed, Spradling's amendment would not have made investment of idle funds mandatory. He voluntarily changed this when the fact was called to his attention, explaining that he had intended to use "shall" instead of "may."

Also Spradling's amendment originally would have provided for investment of the surplus funds, which at times have totaled as much as $100,000,000, in time deposits or Government securities "on which there can be no loss to the State of Missouri."

Restriction Draws Fire.
This phraseology drew considerable opposition, particularly from the Republican side of the chamber, and accounted for most of the lengthy debate.

Senators Leo J. Rozier (Rep.), Perryville, and Hartwell G. Crain (Rep.), St. Louis county, argued that the language was too restrictive and would result in the State Treasurer refusing to invest in government securities through fear there might be some possible loss.

"Under this wording," Rozier said, "it is my opinion that no State Treasurer under any circumstances would dare invest any of the funds in Government securities."

The Republican members won at least a partial victory when Crain's amendment to Spradling's substitute, which struck out the questioned phrase and inserted a provision for investment in Government securities having a maturity date of not more than one year from the date of issuance, was adopted by voice vote.

Science Fair Opens Tonight At Washington U. Field House

2200 Exhibits Made by Elementary and High School Students to Be on Display.

The ninth annual Greater St. Louis Science Fair will be opened to the public tonight in a ceremony at 7 o'clock in the Washington University Field House on Big Bend boulevard.

More than 2200 scientific exhibits, made by elementary and high school students of the St. Louis area, will go on display on the first floor of the field house.

Thirty-seven rows of 84-foot long tables were needed this year to hold the record number of exhibits, which describe and explain a large number of scientific subjects.

Some exhibits reflect the latest scientific developments dealing with various applications of atomic energy, such as the Navy's first atomic-powered submarine, Nautilus.

Displays on Diseases.
Some students prepared displays on diseases. One exhibit describes coronary thrombosis, a heart disease, as "the worst killer in the United States."

In the opening ceremony tonight, Alexander S. Langsdorf, dean emeritus of the Washington University School of Architecture and Engineering, will speak. Music will be provided by the Lincoln High School Band, East St. Louis.

Visitors can view the exhibits following the ceremony from 8:30 to 10 o'clock tomorrow and Thursday the fair, which is sponsored by the Post-Dispatch in co-operation with the university, will be open from noon to 9:30 p.m.

Parents have been invited to attend the fair Friday when the exhibition will be open from 9:30 a.m. until 10 p.m. when the event will end. Norman R. D. Jones, general chairman, urged both parents and the public to attend Friday.

$25,000 in Scholarships.
Students are competing this year for college tuition scholarships valued at $25,000 and $3300 in cash prizes. Names of winners will be announced in Friday's Post-Dispatch and awards will be presented at the fair at 7:30 o'clock Friday night.

Also to be announced Friday will be the names of two students who will attend the National Science Fair next month at Oklahoma City. They will receive expense-paid trips. The exhibits were judged today by a panel of 185 persons.

OFFICER, WRAPPED UP IN JOB, LOSES COAT TO THIEF

Deputy United States Marshal Les Davidson did a good job guarding a federal prisoner in Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood's court yesterday, but not such a good job keeping watch on his own gabardine topcoat. It was stolen.

Davidson sat directly behind the prisoner who is being tried on an assault charge in the Municipal Courts building, and had placed his coat in the spectator area in back of his own seat. When he went to get it after court recessed, it was gone, but his hat, which had been with the coat, was still there.

"I guess the hat didn't fit," said Davidson today as he kept a sharp eye on the prisoner and his other top coat.

FREDERICK F. TRUMPOLD DIES
Frederick F. Trumpold, an electrician for the Post-Dispatch for 35 years, died Sunday of a heart ailment at DePaul Hospital. He was 75 years old and lived at 709 Pope avenue.

Mr. Trumpold retired in 1946. Surviving are three sons, Robert R., Carl H. and Frederick E. Trumpold, and a daughter, Mrs. Warren Ludy. The body was cremated yesterday.

for $750,000 in state funds, took the floor late in the debate to oppose the provision in Spradling's substitute amendment which would permit investment of the funds in Government securities.

"I do not know very much about the speculative money market," he said, "and from the conversation here apparently little is known of it, but I do know that during the past 10 years Treasury notes have paid anywhere from nothing to 2.45 per cent interest."

"During that period, the average rate of return on them has been just three-fourths of one per cent. This is one-fourth less than the earnings on one per cent time deposits."

"Personally, I believe the Governor was showing very good judgment in recommending investment in time deposits."

"The state has no business in the speculative bond market. This is an extremely foolish idea fostered by hysteria over this problem which should not have come up in an election year. The problem is one which should be considered calmly."

If finally passed by both houses of the Legislature before mandatory final adjournment April 26, the proposed constitutional change would be submitted to the voters in the state at the November general election, or at a special election called by the Governor before that time. It would be effective immediately upon ratification by the voters.

A proposed constitutional amendment similar to that recommended by Donnelly, except that it would not limit the amount of funds which might be invested, is pending in the House.

WORK STARTED ON SIDEWALKS IN MEMORIAL PLAZA

Construction began today on diagonal cross walks in two blocks of Memorial Plaza in which pedestrians have frustrated efforts to grow grass, Park Commissioner Palmer B. Baumes said.

The blocks are those immediately south of the Missouri Pacific Building and the Public Library. The walks which will extend from corner to corner and intersect in the center of each block, will be bordered by triple rows of old cobblestones salvaged from the riverfront area, Baumes said.

Where the diagonal walks end at each corner, they will be bordered in a fan-like shape and some cobblestones will be used in the cement matrix at these points to give a decorative effect.

In the block bounded by Chestnut, Pine and Thirteenth streets and Twelfth boulevard, the diagonal walks will be supplemented by a short walk running north from the intersection of the diagonals to Pine street. Other open blocks in the Plaza will have walks in the future, Baumes said.

DEADLOCK SNAGS $2,640,000 FUND FOR RIVERFRONT

Senate Conferee Predicts Approval After Other Parts of Bill Are Agreed On.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17—A Senate-House conference committee was deadlocked today over some provisions of a supplemental appropriations bill, after reportedly reaching an agreement that would give St. Louis $2,640,000 in federal funds for a start on the Jefferson Memorial project on the Mississippi riverfront.

Final approval of the compromise sum for the memorial cannot be given until the entire appropriation measure is approved.

The St. Louis request thus could be the subject of "tradition" when the conferees meet again to work out differences in the bill. A Senate member of the committee, however, told the Post-Dispatch the $2,640,000 was tentatively approved.

Believes It Will Hold.
The Senator, who declined to be identified, said he believed the compromise figure would "hold" in future deliberations on the appropriation bill.

In their first closed meeting yesterday, the conferees worked their way through most of the provisions of the supplemental bill covering appropriations for various Government activities in the current fiscal year, but were unable to reach final agreement on the whole measure.

Senator Carl Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee and spokesman for the conference group, said no details of agreements reached at the first session could be disclosed until the entire bill was approved.

Hayden did not set a date for the next meeting of the conferees, but it probably will be sometime this week.

Originally $3,000,000, as approved by the House, the supplemental appropriation bill provided $3,000,000 as the federal contribution to preliminary work on the riverfront memorial. The House, however, took out a provision that

County Municipality Backing Due If Development Agency Is Set Up

League President Predicts Co-operation, Says Blighted Area Problem Needs County-Wide Approach.

Most of the municipalities in St. Louis county would co-operate with a county-wide land clearance for redevelopment authority if one were established, Mayor Sterling P. Davidson Jr. of Maplewood, president of the County League of Municipalities, said today.

Davidson said he was convinced that the approach toward elimination of the county's blighted areas should be through a county-wide agency rather than by the municipalities.

"No municipality is in a position to set up the kind of organization necessary to cope with a redevelopment program," Davidson told the Post-Dispatch.

Complicated Task.
Davidson, who is a state member of the industrial development department of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, pointed out that getting a rehabilitation program under way calls for civic participation in operation of a planning commission, preparation of detailed plans, formation of a redevelopment corporation and other activities largely beyond the ability of the average county community.

Moreover, he added, blighted areas in most municipalities, while they definitely exist, are too small in themselves to justify the complicated procedure of establishment of a redevelopment agency.

Another reason cited by Davidson as favorable to action at the county rather than municipal level is that few municipalities would have facilities within their limits for relocation of families temporarily displaced from areas being redeveloped.

Referring to Maplewood, Davidson said there was one small area which needed rehabilitation, but that he felt it would be impossible for the city administration to handle the matter through a redevelopment agency.

Would Take Lead.
Davidson said that if a redevelopment agency is established he would take the lead in obtaining co-operation with it on would have permitted the money to remain available until expended.

This could mean the federal money would have to be obligated by next June 30, the end of the current fiscal year, or it behalf of both Maplewood and the League of Municipalities. County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews has directed preparation of a resolution for a redevelopment agency for submission to the County Council tomorrow. Health and welfare agencies have described as blighted 11 major housing areas in various parts of the county, in addition to small pockets of blight needing elimination.

Mayors A. Ray Parker of Brentwood and Elmer W. Whitney of Rock Hill said they would co-operate with a redevelopment authority if one is established by St. Louis county. Their municipalities border an unincorporated area known as Webster Heights, designated by the county planning commission as substandard.

"Our municipality would very definitely work with such an agency," Mayor Parker told the Post-Dispatch. "Redevelopment is too big a job for individual municipalities."

'Tailored to Our Needs.'
Declaring that a development agency could be adapted to the county's particular needs, Parker stated: "It is not necessary to build skyscraper apartment buildings as St. Louis is doing. The type of development can be tailored to our needs and can be similar to development that has already occurred in the county."

Parker stressed the need for attacking substandard conditions simultaneously in both incorporated and unincorporated areas, asserting that the substandard housing found in adjoining Webster Heights does not extend into Brentwood.

Whitney, newly-elected mayor of Rock Hill, agreed, saying: "This is too great a problem for either incorporated or unincorporated areas alone. There must be co-operative action to attack the problem in both areas."

Saying he was speaking for himself alone, Mayor Whitney asserted: "I heartily agree with any feasible approach to eliminating blighted areas. To date a redevelopment authority seems to be the only practical agency that is doing the job of clearing blight."

No action was taken by Schuman or Ogle last August when it was revealed that 55 Madison county private clubs and business establishments had bought Federal tax stamps for coin-operated gambling devices and that wagering stamps had been issued to 13 individuals and taverns in the county.

One Madison county mayor, who said he did not wish to be quoted, told a Post-Dispatch reporter Schuman's crackdown extended to "church bingos and quilt raffles."

LID IS CLAMPED ON GAMBLING IN MADISON COUNTY

State's Attorney Orders
Halt to All Operations, Including Church Bingo.

A tight lid was clamped on gambling in Madison county today as law enforcement officers carried out orders of State's Attorney Fred P. Schuman to call a halt to all gambling operations, including church bingo games.

Slot machines were removed from private clubs, dice game operators closed shop, punchboards disappeared from bars and backroom poker games were stopped as Schuman's orders went into effect, it was learned.

Schuman refused to discuss his action with reporters, but political observers said they believed it was aimed primarily at some municipal officials who had a hand in defeating Austin Lewis, Schuman's candidate for the Democratic nomination for State's Attorney, in last Tuesday's primary election.

Lewis was beaten easily by Dick H. Mudre Jr., a young Edwardsville lawyer, who pledged he would put a stop to large scale gambling in Madison county. Mudre is favored to be elected State's Attorney in the November election.

Schuman and Sheriff Kenneth T. Ogle, who are recognized as the top leaders of the Madison county Democratic machine, were both defeated for re-election as precinct committeemen in the primary. Ogle was chairman of the Democratic county committee and Schuman for years had been chairman of the Granite City committee.

No action was taken by Schuman or Ogle last August when it was revealed that 55 Madison county private clubs and business establishments had bought Federal tax stamps for coin-operated gambling devices and that wagering stamps had been issued to 13 individuals and taverns in the county.

One Madison county mayor, who said he did not wish to be quoted, told a Post-Dispatch reporter Schuman's crackdown extended to "church bingos and quilt raffles."

HIGHEST DISCOUNT RATE IN 23 YEARS ON TREASURY BILLS

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—The Treasury announced yesterday that its short-term borrowing costs increased more than one-fourth of 1 per cent on its latest issue of 91-day treasury bills. The equivalent interest rate now stands at the highest point in 23 years. The latest issue of bills, dated April 19, sold at discounts equivalent to 2.769 per cent interest. This compares with a rate of 2.497 per cent for an issue sold last week. The new interest rate on Treasury short-term borrowings is higher than the discount or lending rate of 2.75 per cent in 10 of the 12 Federal Reserve districts. Treasury bill rates are considered one of the best yardsticks for surveying inflationary trends. The Federal Reserve System only last Friday, in a move to restrain strong demands for credit by business and consumers, boosted its discount or lending rate to the highest point in more than 20 years.

ECONOMIC STUDY IS APPROVED BY BAGHDAD PACT

Resources of Four Middle East Nations to Be Surveyed — U.S. Pledges More Aid.

TEHRAN, April 17 (AP) — The Baghdad Pact Council today approved proposals for a study of joint development of the agricultural, mineral and water resources of the alliance's four Middle East nations—Iraq, Iran, Pakistan and Turkey. Britain, fifth member of the alliance, has promised to contribute £250,000 ($700,000) for technical assistance to such a survey. The United States also has promised increased economic aid to members. The proposals were contained in a report of the pact's economic committee submitted today at the first working session of the organization's top-level council. After a closed meeting the council announced the report was approved unanimously.

Road Expansion. Among the projects slated for study are development of the water resources of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, expansion of road and rail networks, mineral and timber resources, irrigation and other agricultural projects.

The Ministerial Council, composed of the premiers of the four Middle East nations and British Defense Minister Sir Walter Monckton, also approved a report by the pact's counter-subversion committee. Among other things, this calls for educational and information programs to counter Communist propaganda in the area.

The United States observer delegation has no vote but it is reliably reported the delegation voiced approval of both reports. The civilian and military delegates met separately. The military men discussed common defense measures while the civil officials took up proposed mutual economic and political programs.

Increased U.S. Aid. The civilian delegates also studied a promise of increased American aid for pact members through the alliance organization. The United States program was put forward yesterday.

36 IN GROUP REFUSING TO PAY U.S. INCOME TAXES

YELLOW SPRINGS, O., April 17 (UP)—Two couples from here and nearby Cedarville yesterday issued a joint statement that they were part of a nationwide group that was united in a policy of non-payment of income taxes.

Lawrence Templin of Yellow Springs, one of the signers, said 36 persons in all were part of the organization, known as "Tax Refusal Committee of Peace-makers."

Templin said the movement was made because such a large proportion of the nation's income goes for "weapons of war, such as H-bombs, guided missiles and germ weapons." Others in this area to sign the statement were Templin's wife, Oreletta, and the Rev. Ralph and Lilla Templin of Cedarville.

The Rev. E. R. Bromley of Sharonville, O., chairman of the group, said "so minute a portion of the tax money is being spent for any socially acceptable activity that it seems to be only an illusion to consider that one's federal taxes go to anything constructive."

by Loy Henderson, deputy Under Secretary of State.

Henderson also outlined United States policy against joining the pact, despite direct appeals from Iran and Iraq for such American participation.

Henderson told the meeting the United States would co-operate closely with the members of the alliance but said "it is our sincere desire to retain close, friendly and effective ties with other nations in the area."

This explanation upheld the view of diplomats here that the United States is refusing to join the pact in order not to offend Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria and other Arab nations opposed to the alliance.

Text of Russian Statement On Situation in Middle East

LONDON, April 17 (AP) — Text of the U.S.S.R. Foreign Ministry statement on the situation in the Middle East as broadcast by the Moscow radio.

THE SITUATION which has formed at present in the Near East deserves the serious attention of all countries and public circles concerned with the strengthening of universal peace and the further easing of international tensions. It has been noted repeatedly that the major reason for the aggravation of the international situation in the Near and Middle East are the continuous attempts to hammer together and extend the military alignments which serve the aims of colonialism and are directed against both the independence of the peoples of this area and the security of peace-loving countries.

The setting up of such alignments in the Arab-Israel conflict for interference from outside into the internal affairs of independent Arab states or for introducing foreign troops in the territory of the Near East.

In view of the aforementioned, the Soviet government declares:

1. The Soviet Union will render the necessary support to the U.N. measures directed towards the search for ways and means of strengthening peace in the area of Palestine and the implementation of the corresponding decisions of the Security Council.

2. The Soviet Union is of the opinion that measures should be taken in the near future to ease the tension existing in the Palestine area without outside interference from outside into the internal affairs of independent Arab states or for introducing foreign troops in the territory of the Near East.

Whatever interpretation one places on the emergence of this conflict, one cannot fail to see that certain circles of some states, not interested in consolidating international peace, are striving to make use of the Arab-Israel conflict for their aggressive aims and are prepared to go as far as stationing foreign troops on the territory of countries of that area and causing military complications.

The pressure exercised by some states on independent Arab states to force them against their will to join the mentioned groupings such as the notorious Baghdad Pact represents a violation of the principles of the U.N. organization and is contrary to the interests of peace and international security.

Interference in the affairs of Arab countries aims at re-establishing the positions of colonialism in the Near East, in which certain oil monopolies are particularly interested. As is known, the three-power declaration of 1950 is in line with these aspirations. All this is fraught with the danger of an emergence in that area of a hotbed of war and that cannot be permitted.

The Government of the Soviet Union decisively upholds the interests of peace and peaceful collaboration between peoples. Firmly and consistently, it puts into effect measures directed at the relaxation of international tension, which is in accord with the striving of the peoples of all countries, including the peoples of the Near East.

A great achievement of the peoples in the cause of ensuring peace and security in the area of the Near and Middle East has been, after the Second World War, the establishment of the national independence and the strengthening of the sovereignty of a number of states, which until recent times were in the position of colonial or mandated territories.

The Soviet Union regards with sympathy and ardent support the attempts of the Near East countries aiming at establishing and strengthening the independence of Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Lebanon, Yemen, Jordan, Libya, Sudan, Iraq, Israel and others.

The Soviet Union has assessed in the same manner the actions of Britain and France which facilitated the solution of the urgent Near East problems by recognizing the independence and sovereignty of the aforementioned states.

The principles of the respect of national independence, sovereignty, non-interference in the internal affairs of states and the solution of international disputes by peaceful means are enshrined in the U.N. Charter. Being a steadfast supporter of these principles, the Soviet government sincerely and wholeheartedly supported and supports the strivings of the Arab states for the further consolidation of their recently acquired national independence, for an upsurge of their economic well-being.

The Soviet Union sees in the affirmation of the independence and general progress of the states of the Near East an important guarantee of peace and security in this area.

It is precisely for this reason that the Soviet government readily responded to and went toward meeting the wishes of the governments of the aforementioned states directed toward these aims.

At the same time, the Soviet government did not strive to obtain for itself any special advantages and strove to build its relations with the states of this area on the basis of the just principles proclaimed by the peoples of Asia and Africa at the Bandung conference.

National Interests. While striving to ensure the consolidation of peace and the development of international co-operation, with due regard for the rightful national interests of the peoples of all countries, the Soviet government is unwaveringly opposed to the violation of peace in the Near East and any actions which might lead to the outbreak of armed conflicts, or which might be used as pretexts for precipitating such conflicts.

The Soviet government considers that it is possible and necessary to avoid an armed conflict in the Near East and that it is in the interests of all Near Eastern states not to allow themselves to be provoked into being involved in military operations.

At the same time, the Soviet government considers illegal and inadmissible from the point of view of maintenance of universal peace attempts to use ence, which is contrary to the will of the Near Eastern countries and to the principles of the United Nations. The Soviet Union calls upon the interested parties to refrain from any kind of action which may lead to an exacerbation of the situation on the existing demarcation line set up by truce agreements between the Arab countries and Israel, as well as to make the necessary efforts to alleviate the difficult position of hundreds of thousands of Arab refugees deprived of their homes and means of subsistence.

3. The Soviet Union considers it essential, in the interests of strengthening international peace and security, to direct efforts towards a stable peaceful settlement of the Palestine question on a mutually acceptable basis, taking due consideration of the just national interests of the interested parties.

On its part, the Soviet government expresses its readiness to contribute, with other states, to the peaceful solution of unsolved questions.

Fredericks said Cluck persuaded the girl and a boy of 6 to get into his automobile last Nov. 11, then drove to the riverfront and assaulted the girl. Cluck was arrested the same day. Since 1942 he has served four prison terms, for burglary, grand larceny and auto theft.

ADmits BOARD 'GUESSED WRONG' IN PAROLING ROBBER

The State Board of Probation and Parole "guessed wrong" in granting a parole to Frank D. Bird, convicted murderer and bank robber, who was shot and killed by police in a tavern hold-up Saturday night, Chairman Lewis Means said today. Bird was released last January, after serving 30 years in state and federal prisons.

"Our psychiatrist said Bird had a good chance of making good," Means told the Post-Dispatch. "The prisoner was 49 years old, had a job waiting for him in St. Louis and had behaved himself in prison. He went out under supervision, but he failed."

Means added that "a percentage of the men paroled go wrong; we know that can happen." He said Bird reported to parole authorities March 20 that he had been laid off by a freight handling firm because the work was too hard for him. Bird was killed and a former cellmate, Robert Lee Orr, was wounded in the holdup, at the Centerfield Lounge, 3111 North Grand boulevard. A woman bystander was wounded seriously.

ALDERMEN VOTE TRANSIT STUDY FOR APRIL 27

Continued From Page One. Interest in the meeting, but proposed that a public hearing be held at a later date after the aldermen had threshed out the problem among themselves and arrived at some idea of what might be done to improve the transit situation.

Stolar pointed out a citizen's committee has been at work on the problem for more than a year and that their efforts constituted the best scientific approach.

However, his proposed amendment to throw the meeting open to the public was lost on a voice vote and Watson's motion for the more restricted meeting carried. Watson said he had no objection to reports being present.

Mrs. Jerome J. Spector, secretary of the Citizens Metropolitan Transit Committee of St. Louis and St. Louis county, said the committee had had no word as yet from the Missouri Highway Commission on the committee's request that the State and Federal Governments finance an origin and destination survey to determine transit needs.

Riot Inquiry Authorized. The aldermen adopted a resolution authorizing the legislation committee to inquire into the cause of riots at the city workhouse within the last year and to recommend ordinances to prevent such disturbances. The resolution, introduced by Alderman Anton Niemeyer, Eighth ward Democrat, pointed who was later convicted of misconduct in office and served a prison term.

Defense Charges 'Trap.' Thomas C. Quinlan, a defense attorney, argued that the Government had "laid a trap" for Brown, bringing him 1100 miles from his office in Philadelphia to testify before the grand jury here without informing him of the purpose of the trip.

"They led him to slaughter, that's what they did," Quinlan said. He asserted that Brown answered 365 questions before the grand jury, and the indictment charged only that he gave eight false replies.

Brown, now living in Princess Anne, Md., was taken off the Government's payroll shortly after being indicted in 1954. At the time he was executive assistant to the regional inspector at Philadelphia. During the Finnegan inquiry, he was supervisor of accounts and collections at the Internal Revenue regional office in Chicago, with jurisdiction over the St. Louis Collector's office.

The white-haired, ruddy-complexioned defendant acknowledged at his trial that he had been a friend of Finnegan.

He did not deny testimony of Government witnesses who said Brown, in 1950, had called the Finnegan inquiry "ridiculous" and suggested instead that an investigation be made of United States District Judge George H. Moore of St. Louis. The judge had instigated the inquiry.

Brown and his wife, who was with him at the trial, returned has taken a stand against high support prices, said Congress is "trying to do something" Abe Lincoln found out a long time ago you can't do, that's keep all the people happy all the time." He said the veto is "in keeping with what he has been striving for."

Norman Brunsdale, who is G.O.P. Governor of North Dakota and who farms near Mayville, said the veto is "unfortunate at this time unless (Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T.) Benson will use his full power to liberalize price supports."

Charles Burnett, who is South Dakota Secretary of Agriculture and a farmer himself, said he did not think the political reaction will be "as bad as some think." But he said that had the bill become law it would have had a stabilizing effect on markets and would have improved the credit standing of financially depressed farmers.

Wisconsin reaction was hinged upon the effects of the bill upon the dairy industry. Kenneth W. Hones, Chippewa Falls, president of the Wisconsin Farmers Union said, "While it wasn't the best bill in the world, it certainly would have been an improvement over what we've got now." Robert L. Pierce, a dairy farmer of near Menomonie, and Republican national committeeman, said he didn't like the bill because dairy farmers are "not included in it," but Benson had announced 82 per cent support for dairy farmers a short time ago and Wisconsin dairymen would not have benefited from the bill.

"I would veto it if I were President, too," said William L. Schwegman, Carmel (Ind.) farmer. "It wouldn't help the farmer. I think there should be flexible supports."

"We want a farm bill to go through the way Mr. Eisenhower wants it," said Mrs. William Stansifer, Carmel (Ind.) farm wife.

to assist the development and independence in the Middle East region.

The statement mentioned the independent countries of the Near and Middle East, including Egypt, Israel, Libya, Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Iraq and Yemen, and then added:

"The Soviet Union appreciates the actions of Great Britain and France which have contributed to a solution of the problem on the basis of the independence and sovereignty of the above-mentioned countries."

The statement continued: "The Soviet government believes that military conflicts in the Near and Middle East can and should be avoided and it is in the interest of the entire Middle East not to enter into hostilities."

Intervention Excuse.

At the same time, the Soviet statement said it "considers it unjust and unlawful to attempt to use the Arab-Israeli conflict as an excuse to intervene in the internal affairs of the Arab countries and to establish bases on territory in the Middle East."

No offender was mentioned by name but earlier statements left little doubt that the United States was meant.

These three major points were made in the statement. "The Soviet Union will render necessary support to measures undertaken by the United Nations to find ways and means of strengthening peace in the area of Palestine and for implementation of corresponding decisions by the Security Council."

"The Soviet Union considers that measures should be taken in the near future to lessen present tension in the area of Palestine without external intervention which contradicts the will of the Near Eastern states and the principles of the United Nations."

"The Soviet Union calls on interested countries to refrain from any action capable of leading to a sharpening of the situation along the existing lines of demarcation established by the armistice agreement between the Arab countries and Israel and also to undertake the necessary efforts to improve the serious situation of hundreds of thousands of Arab refugees who have been deprived of their hearths and means of subsistence."

"The Soviet Union considers that it is necessary, in the interest of strengthening international peace and security, to work toward a stable peaceful settlement of the Palestine question on a mutually acceptable basis taking into consideration the following points:

CITY AT 'BOTTOM
MAYOR TUCKER

tion plan will require an additional $525,000.

Rising prices of materials and supplies, estimated at 3 per cent, will mean another $335,000, the aldermen were told.

Adding the cost increases of $1,860,000 to basic operating costs of $51,100,000 makes the total approximate $53,000,000, exactly the amount it is believed will be available for spending from all sources during the coming year, the Mayor declared.

"Passage of the earnings tax charter amendment has created the misconception that the city has sufficient funds to meet any new expenses," he stated. "Nothing could be further from the truth. Approval of the earnings tax merely enabled us to retain tax permanently. It did not give us a new source of revenue."

The only hope of meeting additional demands on the budget would be more income from present sources of revenue than is now anticipated, or payment of the gross receipts tax by Public Service Co., he said.

Commends Board. Reviewing last year's legislative record, the Mayor commended the aldermen for closer co-operation with the City Plan Commission and the traffic division on such technical matters as zoning and traffic control.

"By seeking, and in many cases following, expert advice in these fields, the board has greatly improved its record," he stated, citing a marked reduction in the number of "spot zoning" bills passed and a drop in the number of traffic ordinance adopted against the recommendation of the traffic division.

Tucker pointed out that the aldermen last year approved routes for the Mark Twain and Daniel Boone Expressways, but failed to pass an ordinance establishing the route of the Ozark Expressway.

"Because of some confusion over the details of the route, such action may have been justified," he conceded, but he urged the board to act promptly in setting the route to relieve the uncertainty of home owners and to make it possible for the right of way to be acquired.

St. Louis cannot afford to build superhighways into the downtown area without providing adequate parking facilities, the Mayor stated. The Office Street Parking Commission has recommended construction of two municipal garages to serve the central business district and parking lots to serve neighborhood shopping centers in outlying districts.

"The shortage of satisfactory parking is painfully obvious," Tucker declared, pledging that solution of this problem will be one of the prime objectives of his administration this fiscal year.

Parking Lot Regulations. Many parking lots are attractive, he continued, but others, covered with dirt and cinders and equipped with ramshackle offices, "are eyesores which must be improved." In this connection he announced that the city counselor's office is preparing an ordinance which would prescribe minimum requirements affecting the appearance and the operation of commercial lots.

During the coming year the board also will be called on to appropriate funds for a comprehensive study of mass transportation needs, the Mayor said, voicing the hope that the state will agree to bear part of the cost of this survey.

Last year the aldermen authorized issuance of $12,150,000 in bonds to finance the first year of the public improvements program. Projects representing $8,000,000 of this total already have been completed or have passed the planning stage, the Mayor reported.

He indicated that the second-year program will total about $12,000,000, and expressed the hope that the city council and its recommendations before the aldermen recess for the summer.

U.S. TO WELCOME
SOVIET AID FOR U.N. PEACE MOVE

United States-French-British pledge to keep peace in the Middle East.

He replied that the position of the United States was the same as it had always been in that respect and that the 1950 declaration called for action consistent with the obligations of the signatories within the U.N. The Security Council has primary responsibility and the United States has believed it preferable to act within the U.N. Dulles said. He added that if U.N. negotiations did not work, then there would be a new situation.

Dulles said Dag Hammarskjöld, U.N. Secretary General who is in the Middle East on a U.N.-directed peace mission, felt he had made good progress. But, Dulles said, Hammarskjöld had not yet completed the first phase of his assignment, which was to establish procedures that would preclude further border raids and other tension-creating actions. Until these procedures were established a long-range settlement was out of the immediate question, Dulles said.

While the Israelis and the Arabs are, of course, the parties immediately interested in a permanent settlement, Dulles went on, the U.N. must play a considerable role, as must member countries, in offering outside financial help and guarantees.

Asked to comment on reports the Israelis are seeking jet planes from Canada, Dulles said the Canadians were aware that the United States, which has thus far refused an Israeli request for $63,000,000 worth of arms, had no desire to establish a world-wide boycott on arms for Israel. United States policy, Dulles said, was based to some extent on conditions distinctive to the United States and was not aimed at posing a pattern on the world.

For Foreign Aid Study.

Dulles said, in answering a question about the Administration's $4,860,000,000 foreign aid program, now under consideration by Congress, that the Administration believed the time had come for a comprehensive re-examination of the entire foreign aid concept. He said he agreed with a proposal to this effect made by Senator George (Dem.) Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Such a review would be made by a group that would enjoy the confidence of Congress and the country. It would examine United States policy in the light of the new Soviet economic threat and also would evaluate the efficiency of the machinery by which the United States carries out economic policy.

Dulles mentioned two items in this connection. He said there were differences of opinion as to whether the United States should concentrate more on loans than on grants, and whether aid should be given bilaterally, or through international agencies or through regional agencies.

George's proposal parallels the thinking of the Administration, which is planning to explore the problem, Dulles said. In reply to a question as to whether Paul G. Hoffman, board chairman of the Studebaker-Packard Corp. and former European aid administrator, had approached him with a proposal to form a citizens committee to promote the foreign aid concept, only to be turned down, Dulles said it was correct that Hoffman had made such a proposal but not correct that it had been rejected.

Hoffman's idea is one that is in the hopper, Dulles said.

The Secretary was asked, as he was at a recent conference, what the Administration was doing to push the foreign aid bill through Congress. He said he was working actively, that he had discussed the Administration presentation a few days ago with Representative Richards (Dem.), South Carolina, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, before which aid hearings are in progress, and that President Eisenhower would mention foreign assistance in his speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors Saturday night.

Expects Soviet Move.

Dulles said in reply to another question, that he expected a Soviet economic drive in North Africa but had no reason to think it would be successful because the African countries knew Soviet offers usually have "hookers" in them.

The United States, Dulles said, looks with grave concern on state laws aimed at Japanese textile imports. Japan has protested that a South Carolina law discriminating against Japanese textiles violates a United States-Japan treaty.

Such laws, Dulles said, could be a serious threat not only to Japanese trade but to United States trade as well. He pointed out that American foreign trade was protected against discrimination and boycott by the same sort of treaties Japan maintains the United States has violated. If there was a violation by the United States, reprisals would threaten the whole structure of multilateral trade agreements.

MILITARY RECORDS CENTER DEDICATED

High Officials Present for Opening of $15,000,000
Structure in Overland.

The new Military Personnel Records Center was dedicated today, followed by an open

Hugh M. Milton II, Assistant Secretary of the Army in charge of manpower and reserve forces, was the principal speaker. He said the $15,000,000 structure is the first building to be constructed specifically for records.

"In the past," Milton said, "the various departments of the armed forces had to be content with stacking these valuable records in temporary buildings, old warehouses or war surplus munitions factories, which was totally unsatisfactory."

This haphazard arrangement often created long delays in answering the questions of various agencies and individuals seeking information from their records.

Milton said that the 35,000-600 records in the building will be the basis for honoring any claim for various veteran benefits.

Other speakers were Charles H. Cox, Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Navy, and John J. McLaughlin, Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force.

Maj. Gen. John A. Klein, Adjutant General of the Army, introduced the speakers.

Bands from Fort Leonard Wood, the Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Ill., and Scott Air Force Base provided music.

The center employs about 2000 civilians and 36 military personnel, with an annual payroll of $7,000,000. Construction began in October 1953 and was completed last Jan. 31.

Situated on a 27-acre tract, the six-story structure is considered one of the 20 largest buildings in the world and second only to the Pentagon in Washington, D. C., in total floor space, 1,300,000 feet.

PRESIDENT CALLS FOR SOIL BANK LAW AT ONCE

do with the vetoed legislation and the President's proposals. The House Democratic leadership has decided to have a roll-call tomorrow on overriding the President's veto. A two-thirds majority is required in both houses and there is not much chance that the legislation will be enacted over the veto. The roll-call, however, will put the House members, especially the Republicans, on record and this will be campaign ammunition in many districts. If the House fails to override the veto, there is no reason for the Senate to vote.

Democrats assert that the veto is worth from 25 to 30 additional House seats to them in the November elections and that it may be decisive in several senatorial contests.

Democratic national chairman Paul M. Butler is asking radio and television networks that carried the President's speech last night to give the Democrats equal time for a reply. He said the Columbia Broadcasting System has agreed to give the Democrats equivalent radio time next Monday night. National Republican Company also agreed.

The President will make a purely political talk tonight to close a two-day rally of Republican leaders from all parts of the country. Since the farm problem will be a major issue in the coming campaign, he may have something more to say on the vetoed legislation and his own recommendations.

Not Partisan, He Says.
In his radio-television address last night, he denounced the Democrats for making the farm and the farm problem a political football and asserted that he personally would never treat it as a partisan matter.

Perhaps because the subject was technical and complicated, he read the speech slowly and carefully instead of speaking more fluently from notes. On television, his loss of weight was noticeable and accentuated the unevenness of his lips while speaking.

His theme, as in his veto message, was that the rigid price supports of the proposed legislation would increase rather than decrease the billions of dollars worth of Government-held surpluses that now keep down market prices.

The vetoed legislation, he said, was a "hodgepodge" in which the bad provisions more than canceled out the good. He said that he would have gladly signed a good workable farm bill and had not insisted on perfection.

Calls It Bad Bill.
At the outset, he told his listeners: "I had no choice. I could not sign this bill into law because it was a bad bill. In the months ahead it would hurt the farmers more than it would help. In the long run it would hurt all farmers."

"It was a bad bill for the country. It was confusing—and in some aspects self-defeating—and so awkward and clumsy as to make its administration difficult or impractical."

He asserted that he had studied "every detail of the bill over many long hours" and had asked himself four questions:

1. "Would the bill help solve the real problem—the surpluses which hang over the market and push farm prices down?"

2. "Would this bill really help the farmers?"

3. "Would it be in the interest of the farmers to sign a bad bill to get the soil bank?"

4. "Is this a good bill for the country?"

His answers to his own questions were a positive no. He said that when he had searched his mind and his conscience, he had no alternative.

He implied that great pressures had been exerted on him when he was told that it would be a "risky thing in an election year to disapprove this bill."

Tells of His Only Rule.
Looking up from his manuscript, he said solemnly: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am no political expert. I have only one rule: through study, analysis and consultation—and by measuring each proposal against basic principles—I try to find out what is right as I see it. You, the people, expect exactness from me. And, as long as I hold this high office of President, I shall not do anything else."

"I have but one yardstick by which I test every major problem—and that yardstick is: Is it good for America?"

In this election year, however, it would have been bad politics if the Republicans could not offer a substitute for the Democratic farm bill, which Senate majority leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas said would add two billion dollars to the farmers' income this year.

He concluded his remarks by calling on Congress to approve his previous recommendation for additional farm credit legislation. He said this strengthened program was needed particularly by young farmers, many of whom began farming after their military service. In making these loans to young farmers, he said, he and Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson had agreed that "our main guide lines will be the character of the individual."

He promised that his Administrative actions and the recommended legislation would give the farmers more income this year and would be in the best interest of all Americans.

SAFE WITH $515 STOLEN
A safe containing $515 was stolen from the Canada Dry Bottling Co., of St. Louis, 1200 South Spring avenue, sometime over the weekend, police were told yesterday.

Entry was gained by forcing a rear door. The safe was removed from underneath a stairway which leads to a second floor office, police said. The office was ransacked but nothing was taken from it.

Text of Eisenhower Radio-TV Talk

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP).

The text of President Eisenhower's radio-TV talk last night on his farm bill veto follows:

My fellow Americans:
I want to talk tonight mainly with you farm folks, with you men and women on the farms of America. But the subject of my talk is of vital concern to all of you—whether you live on a farm or ranch, in a small village or in a great city.

My subject involves our food and fiber supply. It concerns the well-being of our farm families—the very foundation of a strong America. This is not—or certainly should not be—a partisan matter. I personally shall never treat it as such and I will always resist any attempt to make the farmer and his problems a political football.

As you know, today I found it necessary to return the farm bill to the Congress without my approval.

I took that action with a sense of deep disappointment. Had No Choice.

Tonight I want to talk with you about my decision.

I know you are depending on me to tell you the truth as I see it—and the truth is: I had no choice. I could not sign this bill into law because it was a bad bill. In the months ahead, it would hurt more farmers than it would help. In the long run it would hurt all farmers.

It was a bad bill for the country. It was confusing—in some aspects self-defeating, and so awkward and clumsy as to make its administration difficult or impractical.

The failure to get a good farm law that we worked so hard for, hoped for and expected, leaves us with but two courses of action: first, we shall use the administrative tools we now have at our command to help farmers get more of the income they deserve on this year's crops. Second, we shall look to the Congress to enact the soil bank I asked for in January.

I'll have more to say on both these points just a little later in this talk.

At the moment, I want to go back a bit. You will remember that early in January, more than three months ago, I sent a special message to Congress recommending an expanded nine-point farm program, including a soil bank which would reduce surpluses and improve our basic resource—the soil.

These farm measures were a vital part of a broad program which the Administration presented to the Congress for the health and growth of our entire economy.

Sales, Prosperity Linked.
The farmer had a real interest in the entire program, for his sales and prices depend, first of all, on the prosperity of all America. And likewise, the country's prosperity cannot be healthy without a healthy and prosperous agriculture.

I am pleased that the Congress has already acted on several of my agricultural requests, such as the refund on the federal gas tax and funds for the special school milk program, and funds for the eradication of brucellosis—a menace to the health of our people.

The special message I sent to the Congress was not thought up in a Washington office. It was developed by the indispensable help of farmers from the grass roots of America. It was your program. In it were the thoughts of farm men and women from all sections of our country. I urged speedy passage of the soil bank along with the other requested measures.

Return Not Fair.
My reasons were simple: First, farmers generally were not—and are not—getting a fair return for their work. Farm families, almost alone of our people, are not sharing as they should in the record prosperity of our nation.

Secondly, farm families deserve a better break because of heavy investments they have in land and equipment, the many risks they take, and the sweat they put into their jobs.

Our farmers are the most efficient in the world. In no other country do so few people produce so much food to feed the world. And, such reasonable prices to consumers.

A third reason for my January message to Congress was that our Government owes the farmers help. Unwise and unbalanced price support legislation of the past many years has distorted production and markets, and piled up price-depressing surpluses. These surpluses are our main agricultural problem today.

Acresages Slashed.
They have operated to cut farm income, first, by forcing severe reductions in acreage allotted to farmers for price-supported crops; second, in some cases, notably that of corn, the presence of huge government surpluses has served to drive down prices in the free market where many farmers still sell their crops; third, acreage reductions forced by these surpluses have resulted in increased production of other farm products on the diverted acres and so decreased the prices of those products and income to their producers. These surpluses depressed the income of farm families by many hundreds of millions of dollars last year. That is shocking.

These thoughts were in my mind when on January 9 I sent a special farm message to Congress which opened with these words: "In this session no problem before Congress demands more urgent attention."

The soil bank would have done two things to relieve the price-cost squeeze on farmers. First, it would have bolstered farm income, second, it would have attacked the fundamental problem of surplus surpluses which are the primary cause of the farm troubles today—surpluses which last year kept hundreds of millions of dollars out of farmers' pockets.

In my judgement, no general farm legislation is meritorious unless it tackles this problem, forthrightly and effectively.

My request for farm legislation went to Congress more than three months ago. Scarcely a week went by that I did not urge more speed, for example, on January 25, I said: "Here is a broad program and if the Congress will act on it promptly, it will give the farmers relief."

On February 29, I repeated: "This legislation is needed now."

On March 14, I pointed out that: "The planting season is rushing upon us."

On March 21, I expressed hope Congress would act promptly.

On April 4, I urged immediate action if farmers were to get any relief this year.

Nature does not wait for the government. You don't start farming by pushing buttons, and you cannot stop growing crops by throwing a switch. You must know before you climb on your planters what the government corn program is... you must know before you oil up your drill what the rules are on feed grains. It costs money to plow, to disk and to plant... and you cannot afford to turn around and plow up a crop if the rules are changed on you in the middle of the season.

Studied Every Detail.
Last Wednesday, Congress passed the bill. I was pleased that the Administration's soil bank was still in it.

But the disappointing thing was that other provisions of the bill would have rendered the soil bank almost useless. The fact is that we got a hodgepodge in which the bad provisions more than canceled out the good.

Nevertheless, I studied every detail of this bill over many long hours. For I had said before that I would not insist on perfection, that I would be glad to sign a good workable farm bill.

I wanted to sign the bill if I possibly could. But I owed it to you who are farmers, to all citizens, and to my own conscience to ask myself these questions.

First: "Would this bill help solve the real problem—the surpluses which hang over the market and push down farm prices?"

The only honest answer to that question is: No. On the contrary, by going back to the wartime rigid price system, we would set in motion forces designed to produce more of certain crops at a time when we need less of them. It would also tend to shrink both foreign and domestic markets for some of these crops.

Would Foster Surpluses.
Thus we would encourage even more surpluses; more surpluses which we cannot dispose of faster than we can dispose of them... more surpluses which would further depress farm prices in the market.

Moreover, we can find better farm uses for the million dollars a day that the storage of these surpluses is now costing the government.

My second question was: "Would this bill really help farmers?"

The answer to that is that it would temporarily help some farmers. But the inescapable conclusion is it would hurt many more farmers than it would help. And in the long run, it would hurt them all.

For example, it would threaten to destroy the whole parity concept in our farm legislation by establishing a double standard of measurement for price supports. Further this bill would hurt livestock farmers more than it would help them—although well over half of farm income is from livestock.

My third question: "Would it be in the farmers' interest for me to sign a bad bill to get the soil bank?"

Too Late For Many.
The long delay in getting this bill makes it too late for most farmers to participate in the soil bank on this year's crops. In the south, you're already planting cotton. In the southern corn belt you're already planting corn. Spring wheat is being seeded in the Dakotas. Even the supporters of this bill in Congress admitted in debate last week that it was too late for the soil bank to do much good this year.

However, if the Congress will speedily enact the soil bank, there is a way by which it can help farmers this year. I shall come back to this in a moment.

A further very important question I had to ask myself: "Is this a good bill for the country?" I firmly believe that if the bill is not good for farmers, then it cannot be good for all the other citizens of our country.

And any time our precious natural resources are squandered on crops that we cannot eat or sell—all Americans long for well, these were a few of the questions I asked myself as I studied the farm bill. And when I had searched my mind and my conscience, I had no alternative.

To protect the welfare of our farm families, as well as the good of the nation, I had to return the bill to the Congress without my approval.

Only One Rule.
But I was told, "What a risky thing in an election year to disapprove this bill!"

Ladies and gentlemen, I am no political expert. I have only one rule: Through study, analysis and consultation—and by measuring each proposal against basic principles—I try to find out what is right as I see it. You, the people, surely expect exactness from me. And, as long as I hold this high office of President, I shall not do anything else.

I have one yardstick by which I test every major problem—and that yardstick is: Is it good for America?

So tonight I am reporting to you what I truly believe. Now that Congress has failed to pass a good farm bill—what course is open to this administration?

Let me make this perfectly plain, I do not propose to stand idly by and do nothing.

This administration is resolved to do everything that is legal and sound, in using the tools at its command to help farmers—and help them now.

Efforts Imperative.
The failure of the Congress to enact a soil bank before planting time this year makes such administrative efforts imperative.

I have conferred with the secretary of agriculture and the administration will act immediately on four major fronts:

1. In 1956, price supports on five of the basic crops—wheat, corn, cotton, rice and peanuts—will be set at a level of at least 82½ percent of parity. Tobacco will be supported as voted in the referendum in accordance with existing law.

Within this range of price support flexibility, the administration intends to set minimum support levels that will result in a national average of wheat at $2 a bushel, corn at $1.50 a bushel, rice at $4.50 per hundred pounds.

A separate support for corn, not under acreage control in the commercial corn area will be announced at an early date. This will help strengthen prices for all corn and feed grains.

Price supports on cotton and peanuts have not yet been announced, but will be at least 82½ percent of parity. The secretary of agriculture will shortly announce the details of the new cotton export sales program.

Milk Price Support.
2. For this year the support price of manufacturing milk will be increased to $3.25 per hundred pounds. The support price of butter fat will be increased to 58.6 cents a pound.

3. We will use Department of Agriculture funds where their expenditures will be constructive in strengthening the prices of perishable farm commodities. We will have well over $400,000,000 for that purpose for the 12 months beginning July 1.

We have had such purchase programs in the past—in 1953 and 1954 and in more recent months. The programs helped raise the price of cattle and hogs for the hard-hit livestock man. We have also used these programs for commodities such as fruits, potatoes and vegetables when they were in temporary distress.

These actions, the Administration will take immediately.

Appeal to Congress.
Here is what we are asking Congress to do immediately: Today, I asked Congress to pass a straight soil bank bill as promptly as possible. We want to get it into operation before fall seeding for next year's crops. It is imperative that we get the soil bank authorized this session of the Congress. The farmers of America have a right to demand and expect that.

I have one further proposal to make so that the soil bank can get into operation this year. By a simple provision in the soil bank act, the Congress can authorize the government to begin making payments to a maximum of 50 per cent after the farmer signs a contract. Then immediately after July 1, 1956, farmers who agree to participate in either the acreage reserve or conservation reserve phases of the soil bank program will be eligible for payment.

These initial payments will help our farmers this crop year. Such payments will also enable them to contract for delivery of seeds and trees and for rental or purchases of implements for use at the appropriate planting time. Seed men and nursery men would also, under this proposal, be able to insure delivery of needed supplies to farmers.

Final payments each year would be made to farmers upon compliance.

Benefits Would Grow.
If farmers generally participate in the soil bank program, benefits could add up to as much as an additional $500,000,000 to them this crop year. And of course as the program overcame the surplus problem, the greater benefits would be found in increased market prices for farm products.

We have already wasted valuable time. I shall urge the Congress to act speedily on this matter.

Also, I shall shortly request the Congress for increased authorization to continue our successful movement of farm surpluses into constructive uses overseas. This will further bolster domestic markets.

I also hope the Congress will act promptly to give the farm credit legislation which we have already recommended. This strengthened program will help meet the credit needs of farmers—particularly young farmers and their wives. These young farmers, many of whom began farming upon their return from military service, do have special problems.

Prices Were High.
Their operations began during a period of high prices for land, high prices for livestock, and high prices for implements. Many of them are confronted with a shortage of capital. We want to encourage them to stay on the farms of America. And America needs them on the farms. The Secretary of Agriculture and I are agreed that in the Government's extension of credit to these young farmers, our main guide-line will be the character of the individual.

The administrative actions and legislative requests are sound for farmers. They will give them more income this year.

They are in the best interests of all Americans. We must move vigorously to safeguard the economic health of the farm families of America. That makes sense.

My fellow Americans, I value the trust you have placed in me. It is a great responsibility as I see it—honestly, frankly and regardless of political pressure. That is what I have tried to do—and am trying to do.

Thank you, and good night.

STEVENSON SAYS PRESIDENT FAILS TO FACE FACTS

Criticizes Veto—Asserts Bill Would Have Helped Check Decline in Farm Income.

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C., April 17 (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson said yesterday President Eisenhower's veto of the farm bill "showed again his reluctance to face the facts of the farm depression."

"While the bill was not perfect," Stevenson said, "it would have helped to check the decline in farm income which has already played such havoc with so many farmers."

"The Democrats in Congress tried to help the President meet his 1952 promises to the farmers. I hope they will keep on trying despite this setback."

Stevenson made the comment at a press conference.

Debate Problem.

A possible hitch developed last night in plans for a radio and television debate between Stevenson and Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, his rival for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Stevenson and Kefauver had agreed tentatively to debate at Miami, Fla., prior to the May 29 preference primary in Florida, and in California.

At his press conference, Stevenson suggested as possible dates May 13, a Sunday, in California and either May 20 or May 27—both Sundays—in Florida. The California primary on June 5 and the Florida primary both are considered important in the race for the nomination.

Last night in Miami, Kefauver's Florida manager said the Senator would not debate on a Sunday because "the people of Florida are church-going people and Sunday is no time to hold a political debate."

Stevenson's Florida manager could not be reached for comment.

At Santa Rosa, Calif., Kefauver said last night he was ready and willing to debate with Stevenson "any time our schedules cross." Kefauver said he had accepted Stevenson's invitation to debate in Florida and California and that his managers were working on dates. Kefauver made the statement at a press conference before being informed of the specific dates mentioned by Stevenson.

Visiting Sister.

Stevenson is visiting his sister, Mrs. Ernest Ives, at her farm home here, planning to work on speeches today and tomorrow before resuming his campaigning.

In 1952, the New Jersey primary became a smashing victory for Mr. Eisenhower over the late Senator Robert A. Taft. Mr. Eisenhower got 390,581 preferential votes to Taft's 228,916, and the lion's share of the delegates. Kefauver, unopposed on the Democratic side, received 154,964 preferential votes.

In the general election, Mr. Eisenhower carried New Jersey with 1,374,613 to Stevenson's 1,015,902.

Stevenson, who met yesterday with North Carolina Gov. Luther Hodges, one of his strong backers, said he thought his prospects of winning Florida "are good."

Of his chances in California, Stevenson said, "I confront serious difficulties and large obstacles."

Kefauver has charged that party bosses are supporting Stevenson. The former Illinois governor said, however, that many California Democratic leaders are supporting him.

"Senator Kefauver has characterized them all as bosses trying to crowd him out. Evidently a boss is anyone who prefers me to him," Stevenson said.

DRASTIC BUDGET STEPS IN BRITAIN

Macmillan Ends Bread Subsidy, Boosts Cigarette Tax, Urges Saving.

LONDON, April 17 (AP)—In a drastic budget speech calling on Britons to "save more," Chancellor of the Exchequer Harold Macmillan today lopped off the last of the state subsidy on bread, placed an extra two pence (two cents) tax a package on cigarettes, boosted duties on some types of British wines and ciders and made state savings more attractive.

He stressed that stringent credit restrictions must continue if Britain is to pay its way in the world.

"I am determined that this budget shall dispel any lingering doubts at home or abroad as to the determination of the Parliament and people to secure the welfare and solvency of the nation," he told the House of Commons.

Macmillan increased the tax on distributed profits by 2 1/2 per cent, to 30 per cent, and on undistributed profits by one-half of 1 per cent, to 3 per cent.

To encourage the small saver, he exempted the first £15 ($42) of interest on post office savings from income tax and boosted the interest payable on small denomination savings bonds.

An another step in encouraging saving, Macmillan proposed a national drawing on small savings bonds. Winners would share the interest accumulated on such bonds, which otherwise would pay no interest.

Most observers regarded the budget as an "as you were" budget with no remarkable shift either way.

Macmillan said he estimated Government revenue for 1956-57 at £5,190,000,000 ($14,532,000,000)—an increase of £297,000,000 over last year. Spending was estimated at £4,745,000,000 ($12,866,000,000)—an increase of £183,000,000 over 1955-56. This would leave an estimated surplus of £445,000,000.

PROPOSAL WOULD EXTEND LIMITS OF SEWER DISTRICT

A proposed ordinance which would provide for the first extension of the boundaries of the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District since the agency was established in 1954 was introduced yesterday at a meeting of the district's trustees.

The bill would bring into the district a tract of land on Fee road in north St. Louis county on which a subdivider plans to build 20 homes. The trustees were told, "Most or all of the area lies within the Coldwater creek drainage basin, one of the district's major watersheds."

Purpose of the measure is to permit the subdivider to connect lateral sewers to the district's system at St. Ann. Trustees pointed out that they have decided to adopt no general policy on whether to permit such boundary extensions, but to consider each application individually.

WHEALEN PROMISES VOTERS HE WILL BACK CIVIL RIGHTS

Joseph M. Whealen, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, told the Negro Ministerial Alliance yesterday that if elected he would enforce civil rights laws as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

Speaking at Hopewell Mission Baptist Church, 1529 Wagner terrace, Whealen said that although most Missouri schools are now integrated, state-supported Lincoln University for Negroes in Jefferson City should be continued.

He said Lincoln University has a "tradition," and it should be maintained. He urged that the school's curriculum be improved so that the training it offers is equal to that provided by the University of Missouri.

How Do You Know You Can't Get Rich?

"Many rich and successful men and women," declares the author of a sensational 64-page booklet, "have no more brains or energy than average. They are usually driven to success. Frequently they are so helpless they can't quit even when they want to. Their money is made in spite of themselves."

The author gives a most astonishing formula for wealth and success based on long misunderstood parables in the Bible, a formula which he developed while making four fortunes—two for other people and two for himself. Even while the formula was still incomplete, he made and lost fortunes. Now the formula is complete, he declares success can be won again by the average person and made permanent.

The formula can be followed by rich or poor, in almost any job or business, in any honest trade or profession. And it is so simple that the entire booklet can be read in three hours. Its title is "Get Rich in Spite of Yourself." The book has proved a sensation. 200,000 already sold by mail.

Thousands ordered by sales managers for their salesmen. A leading eastern publisher is offering a de luxe store edition.

Another big publisher wanted to produce a special edition for large corporations to give free to their employees. A big newspaper syndicate wanted to publish it serially in 60 newspapers. Many readers wonder why they did not discover the formula for themselves, it is so amazingly right, so plainly practical and workable.

The entire booklet, containing the complete formula, is offered for only one dollar. The publishers say, "Read it for three hours, watch results for three weeks and if you are not delighted, return the book and get your dollar back." The publishers, Grafe and Grafe, 7122 Melrose Ave., Dept. 251, Los Angeles 46, California, will be pleased to send the 64-page booklet C.O.D. to any reader of this article—$1.00 on delivery plus 44 cents postage and C.O.D. charges. Or the reader may remit $1.00 with order and save 44 cents. In either case, the dollar will be promptly returned if the booklet is sent back within three weeks.

The de luxe book store edition sells at $2.00; so order today, while the economy edition is still being offered by mail at $1.00. "Get Rich in Spite of Yourself."

Kefauver Calls Farm Bill Veto Broken Promise to Farmers

Senator Campaigning in California Says President Must Take Full Blame for Action.

SANTA ROSA, Calif., April 17 (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver, campaigning for California's 68 votes in the Democratic National convention, called President Eisenhower's farm bill veto "a breach of promise" to the farmers.

Kefauver concentrated vigorous and critical attack on the farm vote in four northern California cities yesterday. Today he visits seven more, going as far south as Modesto in central California. He plans to spend tonight at Berkeley.

In a Santa Rosa press conference last night he said Congress might pass the soil bank bill, as President Eisenhower proposed in his radio and television speech.

"But the soil bank isn't going to give relief now. It would replace future losses," he asserted.

Full Blame on President.

"The need is substantial help for farmers at this time."

The Tennessee Senator said President Eisenhower "will now take full blame for the callous attitude of his administration" toward the farmers' troubles.

"This, of course, is precisely where the blame should have been put all the time," Kefauver said in a prepared statement issued in San Francisco. He said farmers previously had "almost universally blamed" Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson for "this Administration's failure to deal adequately with their problems."

Informed that Benson had proposed to raise support levels for five major crops, Kefauver observed:

"If they do it now by executive authority, I can't see why they object to its being done by law."

Benson has had the authority to do a lot for the farmers but he didn't do it."

In a speech at San Francisco yesterday, Kefauver said the present Republican Administration in Washington "is operated by a cabal of big business."

Biggest Single Issue.

"To me the biggest single issue affecting the business community in the present campaign is the unbalanced nature of its representation in Washington," he said.

"My objection is to the fact that big business is represented to the exclusion of all other segments of the business community."

"In effect, what we have in Washington today is a new arm of the Federal Government. A house of industrial lords who occupy the posts where the real day-by-day decisions affecting business are made."

"You and I need not apply."

ENGLISH 'DAVY CROCKETTS' SUFFERING ARROW WOUNDS

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio Copyright, 1956

LONDON, April 17.—One London hospital has six young English "Davy Crocketts" recuperating from arrow wounds and at least 40 other similar cases have been treated here.

A Davy Crockett craze has hit England in the past two weeks with release of the motion picture about the frontier hero to neighborhood and small town picture houses.

An estimated 2000 cats have disappeared in London as Davy Crockett cap-makers pay premium prices for cats.

Giving In...To His Practical Side!

We will tell you, in all honesty, that this gentleman was a little dubious when he first walked into the showroom.

There was no question, to be sure, about his wanting a Cadillac. As long as he can remember he has had his heart set on the "car of cars".

But, quite frankly, he wondered whether or not he was in a position to purchase a motor car as fine... and as luxurious... and as wonderful as the 1956 Cadillac.

But now he is learning some facts about this great motor car that are removing the last trace of doubt from his mind.

First of all, he is learning that a Cadillac is relatively modest in its initial cost... and that many Cadillac models are actually priced competitively with cars in the so-called "medium-priced" bracket.

He is finding out about Cadillac's extraordinary operating economy... and about its astonishing dependability.

He is discovering the remarkable facts about Cadillac's unrivalled resale value... and how Cadillac retains a greater share of its original value over the years than any other automobile in the land.

And, lastly, he is being told that, at this time of the year, his dealer is able to make

Cadillac ownership even more attractive than usual... adding the economy of the moment to the economy of the car itself.

That's why we suspect that—having given in long ago to his heart—he is now giving in to his practical side. And that's a combination no man can resist!

Why not stop in and see for yourself?

As an experienced Cadillac dealer, we have established a wonderful relationship with motorists throughout the community. Our reputation for integrity is your assurance of satisfaction as a customer.

We will be happy to see you at any time.

FOUR PERSONS HURT
IN APARTMENT FIRE

12 Flee Blaze on Second Floor of Building in North St. Louis.

Two women and two children suffered minor injuries early today as 12 persons escaped from a second-floor apartment when fire swept through the upper part of a building at 4258 St. Louis avenue.

The injured, who were treated at Homer G. Phillips Hospital for contusions and abrasions, were Mrs. Arverd Trainer; her daughter, Mrs. Maxine Stringfellow, and two of Mrs. Trainer's grandchildren, Dianne Campbell, 3 years old, and Keith Stringfellow, 3. All are Negroes.

Credited with playing an important part in the rescue were Reginald Stringfellow, 9-year-old son of Mrs. Stringfellow, and Warren Smith, 5336 Patton avenue, a taxicab driver who observed the fire while passing by and turned in the alarm shortly after 1 a.m.

The adult occupants of the apartment, Mr. and Mrs. Trainer and Mrs. Stringfellow, were awakened by the smoke and flames. They assisted five of Mrs. Stringfellow's seven children down a back stairway and also helped to safety Deborah Campbell, 5, another of the Trainer's grandchildren.

Reginald grabbed his baby brother, Lendell, 1, and carried him from a bedroom to the back porch. He dropped the baby into the arms of Smith, who was standing in the back yard 15 feet below.

Dianne Campbell, 3-year-old sister of Deborah Campbell, was injured when she jumped from a window and landed in the yard. Reginald, the last one to leave the apartment, let himself down from the porch and was caught by Smith.

Firemen extinguished the flames. They estimated damage at $1500 to the building and $500 to contents.

The other children of Mrs.

Stringfellow are Reba, 11; Zachary, 7; Beatrice, 6; and Wendell, 4. Dianne and Deborah Campbell does not live with her parents.

LOOK SOUTH
LOOK AHEAD420 million
...and one to grow on!

OUR NOW-FAMILIAR SLOGAN "Look Ahead—Look South!" is thirteen years old this month. But you have to count more than the candles on this birthday cake. Count, instead, the number of times we have used this hard-working phrase since it was "born."

The total is impressive—for in these past thirteen years we've said "Look Ahead—Look South!" more than 420 million times in leading financial publications and in magazines from coast to coast. During this same period, there have been 4,203 major industrial developments along our lines alone.

Every time we say "Look Ahead—Look South!" it is an invitation to all America to share in the opportunities of the modern Southland. And every invitation is a bid for new industries for the expanding South "to grow on."

For all of us, the economic development of the South is not a thing apart. It's as close to a man as the job he holds, as personal as his take-home pay. The future of the Southland is your future—and ours. It never looked brighter or offered more "to grow on."

New Collective Dictatorship In Russia Works Effectively, No Signs of Action by Masses

This Is View of Ambassador Bohlen and Informed Persons in Washington—Ordinary Citizen Bewildered by Downgrading of Stalin.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, April 17.

THE NEW collective leadership in the Soviet Union is working effectively thus far, with only minor signs of strain and uncertainty, in the view of those in the Government best qualified to judge what is happening in the wake of the effort to dethrone Stalin as a demigod.

On the part of ordinary citizens there is some bewilderment at the abrupt switch in the Communist line. They had been led to believe that all power and virtue were centered in the dead dictator. But there is no reason to believe that this bewilderment will result in any significant action on the part of the masses.

This is the view which Ambassador to Moscow Charles E. Bohlen is said to be presenting to top echelon officials in a series of conferences since his arrival in Washington 10 days ago. Bohlen will return to his post in Moscow at the end of the week.

No Signs of Strain.
The 11-man presidium is working as a committee with no signs of strain. Reports of the so-called uprising in Georgia, where Stalin, as a Georgian, was a hero were grossly exaggerated in the outside world. Police restraint was necessary, but there is believed to have been no loss of life. The new form of government—collective dictatorship—is a better description than collective leadership—appears to be functioning smoothly as a committee.

The belief here is that Soviet Premier Bulganin and Communist Party Chief Khrushchev will be on their guard and behavior during their visit to England. Khrushchev is the more impulsive, and he may be needed into some provocative statement, but the conviction of informed officials in Washington is that the two men will be impeccably correct during their British tour.

A new restraint is one of the characteristics of the collective dictatorship which contrasts sharply with the Stalin era, when the old dictator did whatever he wanted to do and was not concerned with the consequences. Thus it is believed the present leaders prefer that in countries such as Syria and Afghanistan, with weak and primitive regimes, the Communists refrain from taking over. If they were to take over, the big uncommitted neutrals such as India would be frightened and the basic objective of Soviet policy would thereby be jeopardized.

Would Spread Neutralism.
That objective is to spread neutralism everywhere until the western military alliance is shattered and American and British bases are liquidated. In the belief of those with the most complete inside knowledge of the Soviet Union, the new leadership has a far better chance of achieving this goal than did Stalin in the old hard-boiled era.

So far as personalities go in the new setup, Khrushchev is chairman of the board. But today, in sharp contrast with the Stalin era, dissents are recorded in the 11-man presidium. There is a rightist deviation and a leftist deviation with Georgi Malenkov representing the former in his belief in the need for more consumer goods and Vyacheslav Molotov, the last of the old Bolsheviks, representing the leftist view that the Soviet Union must continue to build all-out military strength.

If one single thing unites the new collective dictatorship, it is a determination that one man shall never gain the power which Stalin wielded. This power of an absolute despot cannot be exaggerated. All of the top leaders lived in almost daily fear of their lives.

While predictions for the future are hazardous, Molotov, who has been definitely downgraded during the last two and a half years, is likely to be kicked upstairs into the more or less empty position of president of the Presidium and nominal head of the state. That post is now held by Klement Voroshilov, 75 years old, a veteran Bolshevik who survived the Stalin purges largely because he was an innocuous figurehead.

Threat Not Altered.
In the intensive discussions now going on as to the significance of the changes in the Soviet Union, the stress by those best informed is that the threat to the West has not essentially altered. It remains as great, if not in fact greater, than it was four or five years ago. The continuity of that threat through the present evolution in the power relationships within the little group in the Kremlin is based on the following three points:

1. The new collective leadership is still a total dictatorship. The issue of totalitarian dictatorship and what it means for the free world has not been changed in the least by the shift since Stalin's death.
2. Military power keeps abreast or even ahead of western development. The Soviet Union has repeatedly demonstrated that it can perfect the most modern weapons.
3. Bolshevism remains as aggressive as it ever was in refusing to recognize any form of society different than the Bolshevik society of the Soviet Union. The Marxist-Leninist dogmas are as rigid as they

LATEST RUSSIAN JOKE: 10 YEARS IS PENALTY FOR ABSOLUTELY NOTHING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17.

AS often in the past, stories circulated by word of mouth reflect changes taking place at the top in the Soviet Union. Here is the latest story current in Moscow reflecting the shift from the Stalin despotism to the new collective dictatorship.

Comrade Ivan tells Comrade Petrov about the good news of a mutual friend who has been released from a concentration camp and has just returned to Moscow.

"You know," says Comrade Ivan, "that he never knew why he was put in the concentration camp. He was sentenced to 15 years for absolutely nothing."

"Oh, that is not right," says Comrade Petrov. "It is very anti-Soviet to say such a thing. You know as well as I do that the penalty for absolutely nothing is 10 years and not 15 years."

There, the difference today being the necessity to weed out the Stalin excesses sprinkled liberally through text books and histories.

Top policy makers are concentrating particularly during the current conferences in Washington on trying to evolve a new approach on the question of exchanges with Moscow. Bohlen has said in the course of these discussions that both of these extremes must be avoided.

Simply refuse exchanges offered by Moscow, since to do so would seem to put us in the position of keeping an iron curtain over the Soviets had dropped theirs.

On the other hand, it is obviously impossible simply to open the door and admit any and all visitors that Moscow wants to send over. The hope is that a middle ground policy can be announced under which limited exchanges will take place.

As Bohlen has pointed out, the Soviet Union has not one iron curtain, but a series of built-in curtains which surround the visitor with a security apparatus from the moment he sets foot on Soviet soil until he departs.

Economic Expansion.
Under the new collective dictatorship, economic expansion in the Soviet Union is continuing at a more rapid rate. Steel production today is 45,500,000 tons a year, which compares with roughly 115,000,000 tons in this country. But of the Soviet total only an estimated 15 per cent goes into consumer goods, the rest being channeled into weapons or construction of more steel plants. In the United States an estimated 40 per cent of total output goes for automobiles, refrigerators and other consumer goods.

The sixth and latest five-year plan calls for steel capacity of 68,000,000 tons by 1960. There is a determination to believe that the Soviet planners will fail to meet this goal, since they have proved in the past that they can achieve the targets they set.

A group is developing within the Soviet Union known as the "assured people." While this cannot be called a middle class, since they are all dependent on the state, this group of engineers, technicians, bureaucrats and intellectuals do have privileges far superior to those of ordinary citizens. These "assured people" may represent 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 out of the total working population of 100,000,000.

There is also a small "jet set" made up of the sons and daughters of top officials who are indifferent to ideology and who spend their time driving fast cars and listening to jazz. Some slight evidence exists also to encourage the belief that religion has taken hold with some youths who are married in the USSR, although this practice is publicly frowned on.

A great deal of mystery still surrounds the shift from Stalinism to the collective dictatorship which has been taking place for the past three years. The execution of the head of the secret police, Lavrenty Beria, which came early in this revolutionary process, did not really represent an inner power struggle. Beria had openly defied the others on the Presidium and he implied that he would continue to use his hold on the secret police as it had been used in the Stalin era to eliminate those who opposed Beria.

This was exactly what the collective leaders intended to remove and so Beria, with the aid of the army, was eliminated. So far as is known, no westerner has ever seen the text of

Benson Victor On Veto But He Yields on Policy

President's Program Not One the Secretary Would Have Offered.

WASHINGTON, April 17.

THE First Republican Secretary of Agriculture in 20 years learned another lesson yesterday.

Ezra Taft Benson learned that when farm economics and politics clash a compromise is in order. He won President Eisenhower's veto of the election-year farm package, but he had to take a revision of the flexible price support system.

Over-all, the President's new program to bolster farm income is not of the kind that would be advanced by the Secretary. It indicates again a major change in the direction of farm policy within the Administration under the pressures of an election year.

Until last October, Benson rode herd on farm policy, keeping his Cabinet colleagues and other officials well lunched and occasionally reaching out to prod a stray gently.

Facing a Storm.
However, Benson failed to relate low hog prices to politics and the Midwest farm belt vote next November. So when the White House telephones began to scream with reports from Midwest members of Congress, Benson ran up against the kind of thunderstorm that scatters cattle.

If there is one point on which Benson has become sensitive it is the suggestion that the White House has taken over direction of farm policy. His insistence that his relations are excellent with White House staff members of a more political turn of mind carries conviction, but facts belie his easy approach.

Until the White House decided that a soil bank to put money into farmers' pockets in advance of an election had political appeal, Benson was dead set against the principle of paying farmers for doing nothing. In fact, the Department of Agriculture twice rejected the principle last year although Benson made the rebuttal that the plans turned down were entirely different from the Administration's proposal. Under the soil bank the Government would pay farmers for cutting production.

Getting Off Dead Center.
A cabinet colleague, in the midst of the ruckus over what the Administration could do to offset Democratic inroads in the farm areas, commented: "No one is trying to get rid of

Among Republican leaders planning national strategy for the 1956 campaign at G.O.P. headquarters in Washington yesterday were REPRESENTATIVE RICHARD M. ## RUSSIA REJECTS TYING ARMS CURB TO OTHER ISSUES

LONDON, April 17 (UP)—Russia rejected yesterday Western insistence that disarmament be linked with the settlement of other East-West issues, including German reunification.

Western delegates on the United Nations disarmament subcommittee were heartened, however, because Russian delegate Andrei Gromyko conducted a serious discussion of the issues involved.

The subcommittee recessed until next Monday. By then it is possible that Sir Anthony Eden and Soviet leaders Nikita S. Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin will have discussed disarmament.

The West hoped that Gromyko would get authority from his Kremlin bosses to accept or reject the Western plans since the talks hardly can go further without some definite Soviet move.

FLEESON Party School Planned to Boost Nixon

Party Chief Assigns Him to Introduce President Tonight by Design.

By DORIS FLEESON

WASHINGTON.

A CONTROVERSIAL Republican office-holder who has been keeping his head down lately catches the spotlight tonight under circumstances helpful to him.

Vice President Richard Nixon will introduce President Eisenhower at the Republican campaign kick-off here before party leaders from all over the country. These leaders are almost without exception friendly to Nixon and can be expected to give him a great big hand.

It will be a show of strength designed as much to impress the President as the public. National chairman Leonard Hall planned it that way.

The President has still refused to give Nixon a formal endorsement for re-nomination, saying that the convention will decide and suggesting to the Vice President that he chart his own course. But Hall has said Nixon will be the nominee and the chairman has an impressive record for calling the political tunes to which the President in the end dances.

The chairman likes Nixon for the same reason the state leaders like him. Nixon is a politician's politician. He is a rough, tough campaigner who fills the troops with partisan fervor, thereby enabling the party officials to recruit funds and precinct workers.

In every campaign the Republicans have conducted since 1952, Nixon has been the workhorse. The professionals are grateful for the Eisenhower popularity, but Nixon is scarcely less their hero.

He would not perhaps loom so large in their thinking as the Eisenhower Administration had managed to recruit a variety of other young articulate partisan spokesmen. It has not. The Cabinet, drawn from business rather than politics, is of little help on the hustings.

The current campaign school

Campaigning Republicans Will Wear Plate-Sized 'Ike' Buttons

Political Waistcoats, Jewelled Beer-Can Openers Also Designed to Boost Eisenhower.

By JAMES RESTON

The New York Times News Service
(Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, April 17.

THE REPUBLICAN political leaders came to town yesterday for a 48-hour seminar on how to dismember the Democrats and were immediately treated to a gaudy show of the latest fashions in political dress and hardware.

Accordingly, this correspondent is now in position to disclose what the well-dressed Republican will wear when he goes forth to battle in the presidential campaign.

First, of course, he will wear campaign buttons, but those little dime-size "I Like Ike" buttons are definitely out of style. Conservative types can get them, if they insist, but the 1956 models are more colorful than the latest automobiles and they are as big as dinner plates. These carry a variety of slogans: "I Still Like Ike," "Back Ike's program," "We want Ike Again," "Win With Ike," and finally, "For the Love of Ike Vote Republican."

"Ike" is Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of the United States.

A 100 per cent, card-carrying Republican, however, will not limit his support to mere button-wearing this year. He will, for example, certainly sport one of the new political waistcoats. These come in white cricket flannel, with a rayon back. Blue elephants are embroidered on the left breast pocket, but custom jobs can be ordered in other colors, and some are available with "I Like Ike" or a silhouette of the candidate's head sewn on the side.

Of course, the well-equipped male Republican will carry a long category of new garter accessories. For example:

1. Jewelled beer-can openers, with real or bogus diamonds, rubies and sapphires, spelling out "Ike."
2. Fans: "I Am an Eisenhower Fan."
3. Gold "Ike" cuff links and lapel insignia.
4. Imported linen handkerchiefs with "Ike" embroidered on one corner.
5. Keyrings shaped like elephants.
6. "Ike" cigarette holders, as long as Roosevelt's.

To judge by the display, women Republicans will wear stockings with "I Like Ike" printed at readable lengths in

Wenrich's Mistake Was To Change His Will Without Consulting His Lawyer

WHEN Wenrich's mother died, he crossed out his mother's name in his will and substituted the name of his niece. The change he tried to make in his will was not legally valid and as a consequence his property went to the wrong people.

The Court said, "... we have a repetition of all too many cases where good intentions failed to accomplish their purpose. How to warn the public against such costly mistakes is indeed a problem. . . . In short, we might well say to the layman: don't cross out any part of your will and don't underline or add anything. . . . for if you do the overwhelming odds are that you will not have accomplished what you intended and besides you have made a case for litigation after your death."

The moral of this true story is that it is poor economy to try to prepare or alter a legal document without your lawyer's advice. Your will and all other legal documents should be prepared by your own lawyer.

Officers of this company can help you in connection with the business, investment and financial phases of your estate plans. Your will is both a legal document and a financial and business plan for the protection of your family. Good estate planning combines the legal services of your lawyer with the financial and business experience of a trust company.

Good estate planning considers: (1) the needs of your family, (2) the conservation and management of your estate, (3) the cash requirements of your estate and methods of providing for them, (4) special problems connected with certain types of assets such as family businesses and (5) how to carry out your plans in such manner as to minimize the tax burden.

The broad experience of this company in handling a great many estates and trusts during the last 66 years should prove helpful to you in planning the disposition of your own estate. We shall be glad to put our experience at your disposal and to cooperate with you and your lawyer in developing an estate plan suitable to your needs. You are welcome to come in at any time without obligation to discuss your affairs and our services.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Stronger Ticket?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
President Eisenhower's confidence in Vice President Nixon and the support for Mr. Nixon among Republican leaders raise the question whether Republicans are justified in debating the qualifications of other vice presidential possibilities, especially Gov. Herter of Massachusetts. No disrespect for President Eisenhower or other party leaders and no hostility to Mr. Nixon can be inferred from a candid appraisal of political realities.

Mr. Nixon deserves the admiration he has inspired. He has raised the office of Vice President to a new dignity. He has fulfilled a long series of responsible tasks without a major error. The trifling points of discretion as to a few isolated sentences in certain speeches only emphasize his large success in advancing the Administration's foreign and domestic policies.

When all this is said, other factors should not be ignored by the Republicans. It is still doubtful whether those who are affiliated with the party make up a majority of voters. Whatever rebellion the Democrats face in the South it is likely the Republicans will lose electoral votes in the South, either to the Democrats or to a third party. The issue of the President's health may cause some loss of votes in the North. Farm unrest and better labor organization present new threats to the G.O.P.

Mr. Nixon, unfairly in my opinion, must overcome a considerable handicap of unpopularity in the very groups that may be essential for Republican victory. Continuity of Republican control is too important to depend upon the personal friendships among party leaders.

The real question the party should face is whether in the 1956 election, which may well be decided by a few votes, a ticket of Eisenhower and Herter is not stronger than a ticket of Eisenhower and Nixon.

Courage and Red China

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Reader James P. Warburg's letter from Greenwich, Conn., contained my sentiments, and I am sure those of many others.

Rational judgment on the question of Red China cannot be based on emotionalism. No one likes to remember "those hands are dripping with the blood of Americans killed in Korea." However, as Mr. Warburg points out, recognition of Peking would not constitute approval any more than our maintenance of diplomatic relations with Moscow implies that we like or respect the Soviet Government.

The American people are not stupid and if facts from the White House are presented without political attachments, emotional sentiment will cease.

In view of the fact you are now printing Senator John Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage" and many of us are reading and reviewing the courage of history's great men of courage, I can't help but visualize the dramatic effect if the leaders of both our great parties would put "votes" aside and present the true facts of our China policy.

The result might amaze both President Eisenhower and the leaders of the Democratic party.

MRS. C. M. OSBORNE,
Affton.

Everybody Is Boss

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Last week Senator Kefauver reaffirmed his belief that even though the "political bosses" were backing Adlai Stevenson, "the people" were for him. Democratic politics must be in a state of confusion in Illinois with over 703,000 "bosses"—the number of voters, who showed their preference for Stevenson in the recent Illinois primary election.

Excelsior!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The news that three Denver Post reporters had been ordered to struggle through Rocky Mountain snowdrifts with the rescue party for the stranded horse, Elijah, evoked memories of a legendary newspaper story. The story concerns a tough old editor who, when one of his reporters reported to say he had been thrown bodily from the presence of an unwilling interviewee, roared: "You go right back and tell that man he can't intimidate me."

I could just see Editor Palmer Hoyt of the Post telling those three reporters: "Go up and rescue that horse. We can't let the snowdrifts intimidate us."

Worried Over Israel

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In describing our inertia in the Middle East crisis, a leading British writer says, "The tragedy is that neither the sitting President, nor the impetuous Dulles has apparently the wit or courage to deal with this perilous situation." Must tiny Israel be overrun before we instigate action?

The Farm Bill Vetoed

President Eisenhower's veto of the farm bill was an act of political courage founded on sound principle.

This measure, with its restoration of fixed price supports at 90 per cent of parity, its revival of a discriminatory dual parity formula and its other appeals to particular crop interests, may have been shrewd congressional politics, but it was bad economics.

For it would have renewed and strengthened a price support system which encourages the diversion of manpower and soil resources to the production of crops which the nation does not need. It would have continued a system of legislative favoritism to a few well organized farm blocs. It would have sacrificed progress toward a healthy and effective farm policy to the immediate need for improvement of farm income.

So the President was justified in sending the bill back to Congress without his approval. He mingled principle with a dash of political expediency when, in doing so, he announced that price supports for the major crops will be set this year at no less than 82½ per cent of parity, while the support for manufacturing milk and butterfat also will be increased. This means $2 wheat, $1.50 corn and $4.50 rice, moderate increases over the present support levels.

By thus increasing support prices in order to improve farm income this year, the President admits what his Administration had been loath to admit before—that the farm situation does call for immediate remedies. The toll bank would not have improved farm income this year. By taking land out of production at rentals amounting to half the support price for crops, it would have reduced immediate income instead, though promising a long-range improvement through curtailment of surpluses.

It was on the premise that something else was needed to bolster income now that the Democrats in Congress—with some indispensable Republican support—insisted on restoring price supports at 90 per cent of parity. Now that the President has accepted their premise, his program will be subject to fair criticism if it fails to improve the farm situation. Neither the farmers nor the Democrats will overlook the fact that the Administration did not offer 82½ per cent of parity until after Congress had tried to legislate 90 per cent.

How far short the price-support system falls of being a sound farm policy was indicated when the President remarked, in his radio-TV address, that more than half of farm income comes from livestock—which benefits from price supports only indirectly, if at all.

The truth is that neither the Administration nor the advocates of high, fixed price supports have faced up to the implications of this crucial fact. If farm income is to be sustained by Government action, as nearly everybody seems to agree, what kind of action will be effective in those areas where price supports are not?

Mr. Eisenhower mentioned the possibility of purchase programs for beef, hogs and other perishables. But Secretary Benson's pork-buying program last winter was a joke. It made no perceptible difference in the price of hogs. Something else will be needed—perhaps a food stamp plan and other ways of stimulating consumption, perhaps some form of direct payment to livestock producers, perhaps a combination of both.

Both Republicans and Democrats would do the country a favor if they started debating farm policy in these terms instead of merely debating the level of price supports.

What Are They Hiding?

The International Union of Operating Engineers barred the press from its recent Chicago convention in an empty effort to retaliate against the truth. As a consequence, Alicia Patterson, editor of Newsday at Garden City, Long Island, has protested to the union, the AFL-CIO and Secretary of Labor Mitchell that the rights of the press were violated.

In this case the union violated its own responsibility more than rights of the press. The press has no absolute right of access to private meetings, and has even had a fight on its hands to win proper access to meetings involving public business. Still a union convention is certainly considered a legitimate news source. And when a union bars reporters, the natural question is: What does the union have to hide?

The operating engineers have adopted an unusually defensive attitude toward instances of harboring hoodlums. Secretary of Labor Mitchell told the union, "You have the responsibility to see to it that these people are tossed out of the trade union movement." But instead of doing that, the union has tossed out two Long Island members, William Wilkens and Peter Batallas, who fought hoodlumism.

Wilkins had testified in court that he saw eight men beat Batallas at a union meeting. The testimony occurred in the trials of two union leaders, Joey Fay and Bill De Koning, who were sent to prison for extortion. Yet in a standing vote with the press barred, the union convention affirmed the ouster of two men who had the courage to oppose such bosses.

The operating engineers' union cannot hide the truth by excluding the press from its meeting. It can only call attention to a sorry record.

No 'Forbidden Books' Lists

Some dealers say that they are suffering "severe financial losses" because they are uncertain which magazines or comic books violate the St. Louis ordinance against the sale to minors of obscene or crime-inciting publications in this form. They say they do not have time to study every publication received from distributors. So they return all in this category rather than risk arrest for violating the law. One retailer says that what is needed is a standard guide, or some agency, to tell them what they may and may not sell.

It is a little odd to hear a dealer saying, in effect, that he does not know the contents of a product he is offering his customers. In the case of most other merchandise, a dealer generally is willing "to stand behind" what he sells. When he has doubts, he either investigates the product or refrains from offering it for sale.

It is inconceivable that the city ordinance should have listed periodicals by name since that would leave them under a ban even if their publishers cleaned them up. Also it would offer no protection against publishers ready to change names to circumvent the ordinance. Further, this might have led to the unfortunate prescriptions which occurred in places like Detroit and Dubuque—evils which the St. Louis ordinance seeks to avoid. Its description of the matter to be withheld from minors, however, is couched in language which courts have held to be clear enough to be understood.

If the dealers wish to set up an unofficial advisory agency of their own, they certainly may do so. But a little pressure on publishers—and distributors—to comply with the "code" adopted by the comic-book industry itself could quickly solve their problem. The publisher who is eager to observe these rules causes no trouble for retailers. That comes only from a handful seeking "to beat the law" for the sake of profits.

Off to a Good Start

The Senate's special hearings on the adequacy of the Air Force opened with dignity and restraint, and with a statement of first principles from Gen. Omar N. Bradley.

"I firmly believe," said Gen. Bradley, "that if a third world war started as a planned war, it would open with an all-out nuclear attack on the United States." He added that this would not be true if a general conflagration spread from some small war, and that is also a matter of concern for strategists.

Both Gen. Bradley and Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, the Senate Armed Forces subcommittee's first witness, agreed that the H-bomb, the jet plane and the guided missile have radically increased the risk of surprise attack since the date of Pearl Harbor. Gen. Smith, who was Gen. Eisenhower's Chief of Staff in World War II, warned especially against underestimating Russian progress in science and armaments.

If it is possible today to launch devastating attacks across oceans and continents, then it also follows, as Gen. Bradley stated, that air power to deter such aggression must be in existence and in readiness. Paper plans and reserves do not answer the need.

The specific question before the Senate group is whether the nation's present Air Force answers Gen. Bradley's description of the need. The subcommittee chairman, Senator Stuart Symington, has repeatedly criticized the Eisenhower Administration for economizing on air defense. But the Missouri Senator wisely devoted the first day of the hearing to a sound discussion of general strategy by two of the nation's most respected men and generals.

The high plane of the testimony is encouraging. The public has grown somewhat skeptical of dire warnings which precede requests for larger defense expenditures, and would be more skeptical if campaign politics influenced so important a subject. The first day of the inquiry should set the pattern for those to follow.

Missouri's Penal Alternatives

Gov. Donnelly's proposals for improving Missouri's nineteenth-century penal system have elicited strong support from Director James V. Bennett of the Federal Bureau of Prisons. If the legislators pay heed to the expert testimony of the federal prison chief, the state could make tremendous advances in a field made disreputable by neglect.

Director Bennett appeared before the Missouri Senate's committee on corrections. He said that far from being overly free with the $75,000,000 bond issue the Governor was in fact "quite conservative" in estimating the prison system's needs. He applied that description specifically to Mr. Donnelly's recommendation of $13,000,000 for construction of a medium security institution. The House has cut this figure to $10,000,000, and there has been talk in the Senate Appropriations Committee of eliminating the facility altogether. That would be a serious mistake. As Mr. Bennett noted:

A medium security prison would enable separation of prisoners for whom there is some hope of rehabilitation from hardened criminals. You just can't do it in the type prison you presently have.

Director of Corrections Carter has described the existing penitentiary as a "school for crime," and that suggests the choice that is open to the Legislature: Continue operating an institution that turns out graduate safe-crackers, holdup artists and worse, or create the medium-security installation that offers the hope of rehabilitating men, not ruining them.

Best Way to Poll-Tax Reform

Senator Holland's poll-tax bill provides a cumbersome way for going about a simple piece of business. The Floridian offers a bill which by constitutional amendment would end the requirement that voters in some states must pay poll taxes before being allowed to vote in federal elections. The amendment procedure requires a two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress and ratification by 36 states. In proposing this complicated method of poll-tax reform Mr. Holland is joined by nine other Senators, all from the South.

Why not do it the simple, direct way, by enactment of a statute? A bill by Senator Humphrey of Minnesota would take that route. An ordinary majority will then suffice, and no ratification required.

The poll-tax laws are unjust and repressive, but they are neither as important nor as emotion-provoking as several years ago. Most states have abandoned them. They continue as archaic vestiges only in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia. Electoral and racial reforms on other fronts have long since left poll-tax reform stuck far behind in the mud of the past.

By all means let's get rid of this undemocratic bar to the ballot. But need we set a whole River Rouge plant going to produce one hubcap?

How to Expand the Base

Former County Planning Director M. Eugene Baughman has suggested that some of the county's substandard housing areas might be developed as industrial sites. It is a suggestion worth serious study.

This same idea was bandied about by individual candidates in some of the recent municipal elections in the county. Like Mr. Baughman, most of the office-seekers were hoping such a program would create a better balance of property values for tax purposes. Some even promised an eventual tax cut because of the expected rise in assessed valuations. It was attractive doctrine.

Surprisingly, however, everyone seems to ignore the most obvious method of expanding the tax base: By a reassessment program that would lift every property to an assessment equivalent to 30 per cent of true value. In general, according to the circuit court grand jury, newer residents are carrying more than their fair share of the tax load. Many older properties evidently are scandalously under-assessed.

We are not suggesting that efforts to attract light industry to the county's substandard areas wait on completion of the promised parcel-by-parcel reassessment. This line certainly ought to be pursued concurrently with the reassessment program.

But it will be much simpler to attract industry if every property owner in the county is carrying his fair share of the tax load. The high tax rates in many county communities, caused in large measure by the assessment mess, act to repel industry, not attract it.

Scarcity Just Won't Work

Former Democratic Congressman in California says U. S. will not solve farm problem until it quits trying to reduce production, finds ways to increase consumption; 'have to learn to think in terms of distribution'; diets can be improved everywhere.

The Mirror
Public Opinion

Jerry Voorhis, Former California Congressman, Now Executive Director, Co-operative League of the U. S. A., in the Los Angeles Free Press

The United States is waking up to the fact that the distress of agriculture and the decline of farmers' incomes constitute a deep major national problem that has got to be solved.

The superficial approach is to say, "There is at present a surplus of farm products, so let's take measures to reduce production."

Only trouble is, it won't work. No really new ways of trying to reduce production have been suggested. And all the old ones have failed. They have failed because American farmers are too good at farming. Maybe they ought to fail as long as there are one billion hungry people in the world.

A basic cause of agricultural distress is the refusal of policy and opinion-makers in the United States to think in terms of abundant production and consumption. Instead they insist upon "thinking" in 1890 terms about the 1950 world.

It won't work. American farmers are geared both technologically and psychologically to produce an abundance. This column predicts that nothing—repeat nothing—is going to change this.

What can and must be changed are certain habits of thinking. Some people—in fact a good many people—still retain the idea that it is good for other people's character if they are somewhat hungry now and then.

There is no doubt that privation and sacrifice develop character—when they are necessary. If there is not enough to go around, then the finest people are the ones who deny themselves in order to leave more for others.

But it is an entirely different matter to insist that other people be in want when there is or could be enough for all. We have to learn to think in terms of distribution and consumption of an abundance of food and fiber. The Wallace-Hoover poll of farmers showed recently that farmers are already doing this. In this poll, farmers were asked which of six so-called "farm" programs they would most favor.

Fifty-three per cent of them put at the top of their list the following measure: "Make the school lunch program reach twice as many children as now."

Forty-one per cent said the same should be done with the special school milk program. And 38 per cent proposed adoption of a food stamp plan to put food surpluses within reach of needy people.

These three measures led all others by a very substantial margin. No other proposal received support from more than 29 per cent of the farmers answering the poll.

The fact is that if all the 8,000,000 United States families whose incomes are less than $2000 a year had adequate diets, their added consumption would equal all the so-called food "surpluses" of the past three years.

And what about the one billion people in the rest of the world who are downright hungry every day? Obviously the United States cannot sprinkle its agricultural surpluses over other countries just to be rid of them. It is no simple matter even to give food away—and not always even wise. But it does not seem beyond reason to believe that with chronic hunger on the one hand and chronic surpluses on the other, some rational plan of bringing the two together through some world food plan could be devised.

But it won't be done until we start preferring abundant production and consumption—and learning to live with them—instead of apparently preferring an artificial scarcity. Especially since attempts to impose artificial scarcity on United States agriculture have never succeeded, and probably never will.

What 'Big Business' Made Possible

From Student Life, Student Publication, Washington University

We have been a bit disturbed recently over more or less casual comments made in classes by some professors. It seems that it is somewhat the fashion today, among certain professors at least, to speak deprecatingly of business, business men and, in particular, what is commonly called "big business." Frequently comments are heard to the effect that "big business" was for this policy, with the implication that "the people" in any way if business was for it. Or sometimes there are comments about "big oil" or "big steel" with a sneering tone.

Well, it is, of course, the privilege of any professor to speak in these terms, even if they don't define them, as they seldom do. We cannot complain about the tone used, even though it is obviously, all too frequently, one of sarcasm.

We only suggest that these professors as they go through their day—awakened by a General Electric alarm clock, eating toast at breakfast from a Westinghouse toaster, driving a Chevrolet to school, getting gas from Standard Oil pumps, doing research on a grant from some big company—we only suggest that they reflect a bit on the possibility that "big business" isn't so wicked and evil as some try to make out, and that the interests of "big business" are not necessarily diametrically opposed to those of "the people."

If, however, after this these professors remain unconvinced and fail to appreciate the alarm clocks and cars and radios and other products, we have one last suggestion. We suggest that any such unconvinced professor refuse to accept the benefits which will be forthcoming from the Ford Foundation grant to raise faculty salaries. After all, this is "big business" money made possible by the sales of motor cars and trucks.

Diary of Grim Captivity

WHITE COULES, by Betty Jeffrey. (Philosophical Library, 204 pp., $3.75.)

Miss Betty Jeffrey of Melbourne, a member of the Australian Army Nursing Service when she became a prisoner of the Japanese Army in February, 1942, and this is the surreptitious journal she kept during three-and-a-half grim years in captivity.

Sixty-five Australian nurses, being evacuated from Singapore, were aboard the Wyner Brooke when it was sunk by Japanese aircraft at the entrance to the Java Sea off Sumatra. Of the 53 survivors who made it to shore, 21 were massacred by the Japanese soldiery. The remaining 32 women were crowded into a miserable, tropical prison camp and forced to do the heaviest kind of labor, from chopping down rubber trees to digging graves for the women who died, besides cleaning septic tanks and sewers.

Along with their life as "white coules," the nurses were subjected to frequent, sadistic abuse from the Japanese guards who were usually drunk. Starvation, beriberi, and harsh cruelty soon began to thin their numbers. All of the women suffered from malaria, typhus, or dysentery. In August, 1945, when the Japanese finally announced the war was over—without troubling to mention who had won—Miss Jeffrey weighed but 84 pounds and was one of the scant 24 nurses who had survived the Wyner Brooke back in 1942, and were still alive.

In the straightforward telling of the story of her horrible ordeal, Miss Jeffrey writes with pluck and a wry humor, seeming to have only slightly retouched the wartime diary which she kept in a child's exercise book. As a record of man's incredible inhumanity to his fellow human beings it should not go unnoticed.

One Who Survived a Purge

THE FRENCH FAUST: HENRI DE SAINT-SIMON. (The French Library, 225 pp., $3.75.)

Henri de Saint-Simon was the founder of industrial technocracy; he was also a modern educationalist and sociologist, as well as one of the first advocates for a United Europe. Besides all that he was a French aristocrat who managed to survive the French Revolution and Terror. He was a man who, as author Dondo so aptly put it, belonged to the class of eccentric, unbalanced, unstable individuals from whom are recruited poets, reformers, founders of religion.

With all these attributes in mind one would expect a biography of such a man to be something elating and inspiring. Instead, however, we find Henri de Saint-Simon to be a spineless individual willing to sell his services to the highest bidder or to whoever was in power. Proud of his ancestry, relentless in his quest for knowledge, and money, driven by a boundless ambition, Saint-Simon is considered by author Dondo to have been a French Faust. Compared to the classical Faust, Saint-Simon's soul was neither noble nor worth buying.

High Quality Paperbacks

FROM THE GROUND UP, by Lewis Mumford. (Harvest Books, $1.25 ea.)

Harvest Books is one of the newer and better of the paperback series, and these two volumes are representative of the high-quality reading matter they offer. The books are attractively designed, sturdily bound, and slip easily into the pocket. Lewis Mumford is one of the most authoritative and certainly most articulate critics of New York's changing skyline. In this book are collected 26 of his most informative essays on the subject from The New Yorker, and without doubt their significance extends far beyond the city they concern. As for Mr. Cozzens, whose novels are lamentably infrequent these days, this book brings back into print one of his earlier tales, a story of a small Connecticut town. Like all Cozzens novels, it deals on the surface with a small group of people but succeeds in throwing much light on human nature in general.

MIZELL BATTLED HARD IN CARDS' OPENER WITH REDLEGS

TWO HITS EACH FOR SARNI AND MOON; JABLONSKI GETS A HOME RUN AND SINGLE

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

CINCINNATI, April 17.—Wally Moon, the Cardinals' leading hitter in the exhibition circuit, set up one run and drove in another with hits this afternoon as the Cardinals opened their National League season under new Manager Fred Hutchinson at Cincinnati's Crosley Field.

The starting pitchers were strapping southpaws, Joe Nuxhall, a 17-game winner for the fifth-place Redlegs a year ago, and Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell, Redbird hurler back from two years in service.

Moon, who hit .392 in spring play to withstand first-base competition, doubled to lead off the game, setting up the first St. Louis run, and stroked a two-out run-scoring single after Bill Sarni had delivered his second double in the fourth inning. Cincinnati, meanwhile, scored one in the second on a long homer by Ray Jablonski, former Redbird third baseman, and Jabbo left off with a single in the fourth as Cincy tied the game at 2-2.

The temperature was not much more than an uncomfortable 50 at game time, and the crowd was slow in arriving for pre-game ceremonies, a Cincinnati tradition.

As highlights of the activity, Mayor Charles P. Taft was landed in a helicopter on the outfield grass. And Governor Frank J. Lausche of Ohio threw out the first ball.

Because an exception is made in National League rules prohibiting spectators from the playing area from the left field grandstand to a point in right-center.

The 13 rows of folding chairs behind a three-foot high temporary wire fence cut about 40 feet off the playing area from left to right-center. The distance at the left field line, for instance, was only about 238 feet and in dead center approximately 375. Ground-rule doubles were a constant threat. Attendance was about 33,000.

Babe Pinelli, Dusty Boggs, Tom Gorman and Hal Dixon were the umpires.

The play-by-play: CARDINALS — Nuxhall's first pitch was a called strike. Moon hit a ground-rule double into the left-center field crowd. Schoendienst grounded to Temple.

REDLEGS — Mizell's first pitch was a called strike. Temple filed to Mizell. Burgess singled to left. Sauer stopping at second. Virdon forced Vidor. Temple to McMillan. ONE RUN.

Antonelli Hits Homer, Giants Beat Pirates

NEW YORK, April 17 (AP)—Johnny Antonelli held Pittsburgh to six hits, and hit a home run as the New York Yankees opened their home season at the Polo Grounds with a 4-3 victory over the Pirates with the aid of two unearned runs. Dale Long hit two homers for the Pirates.

Catcher Danny Kravitz made two errors, leading to the Giants' victory before a crowd of 12,790 customers.

After Kravitz dropped Antonelli's pop foul in the seventh inning, the Giants' lefthander poked a homer into the lower right field seats. Then, with the count tied at 2-2, the Giants shoved over two more runs in the eighth.

Alvin Dark walked, Willie Mays doubled, and Dusty Rhodes was passed purposely. Dark scored after Hank Thompson filed out.

Dick Groat then threw to Daryl Spencer and Mays went to third and kept right on to the plate, where Kravitz dropped Long's throw from first base.

Long homered in the fourth and ninth innings, both times with the bases empty.

Bob Friend, the loser, had put the Pirates ahead, 2-1, with a single scoring Gene Freese in the first of the seventh.

Four Montreal Aces On National Hockey League's Star Team

MONTREAL, April 17 (UPI)—Jean Beliveau, the big 24-year-old center who led the Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup championship, was a unanimous choice today on the 1955-56 NHL All-Star team.

The team also included 36 National Hockey League All-Stars of his talented teammates.

Defenseman Doug Harvey, right wing Maurice (The Rocket) Richard, and goalie Jacques Plante were the three other Montreal players honored in the annual poll of hockey writers, broadcasters and telecasters from the six league cities.

Left wing Ted Lindsay of the runnerup Detroit Red Wings and defenseman Bill Gadsby of the New York Rangers completed the first team.

The 34-year-old Richard, highest scorer in N.H.L. history, won a berth on a league All-Star team for the thirteenth consecutive season. He has been named to the first team eight times and to the second team five times.

Benny Yanger Dead; Stopped Abe Attell in '02

CHICAGO, April 17 (AP)—Benny (The Tipton Slasher) Yanger died Sunday night in Illinois Masonic Hospital after a lingering illness. He was 74 years old.

Yanger, a great featherweight and bantamweight, fought scores of the best boxers in his prime and reached his peak in 1902 when he knocked out Abe Attell in the nineteenth round at St. Louis. He kayoed young Corbett and defeated George Dixon among others.

In his late years he was a boxing instructor at the Chicago Athletic Club.

President Shows His Different Pitch

DiMaggio, Here, Boosts Boys Towns and Cardinals

By Jack Rice
Two young women, not long out of bobby socks and into high heels, stood in the lobby of the Fox Theater last night, celebrity-craving their necks. "Who's all going to be here?" asked Girl Number One. "Oh, movie stars and Joe DiMaggio," said Girl Number Two. "Oh, really?" said Girl Number One, bleacher-volume delight in her voice. The moral is, Once a Yankee, Always a Yankee, with the advantages thereunto.

Backstage, among the movie stars and who-all, former Yankee Clipper DiMaggio was a tanned, relaxed, urbane man, what every major-league player hopes to grow up to be. Life, as DiMaggio represents it these days, is a pleasant thing.

His appearance was for the benefit of "Boys Towns of Italy," and he almost forgot about it. It is a disadvantage, maybe the only one, of living free of schedules. "There I was in Panama, fishing," said DiMaggio, "and the second day on the boat I remembered, 'Omigod, I promised 'em I'd be in St. Louis.'"

Boosts Game in Italy. This was DiMaggio's third appearance at a benefit for the Italian version, run by an Irish priest, of the Nebraska program for boys who never have had anything given to them before, except hum decisions. DiMaggio met the project last summer in Italy. He liked it, and the sponsors liked him. He broke ground for the second Boys Town there, and, as practical propaganda, donated some baseball equipment. The game hasn't overwhelmed them yet, he hears, but DiMaggio has faith. He knows for a fact baseball is good for Italian boys, too.

He stood backstage at the Fox, holding court without an appearance of being aware that what he was doing. "This is the way I like to live," he said. "No schedules, no trains, no worry about base hits. Yes, I've had offers from baseball, none recently, though. I let it be known that the thrill was gone for me, when I quit playing."

Here First at Age of 19. A woman approached and said, "Joe DiMaggio. My favorite Yankee. I remember when you first came here." His voice seemed to grow soft with nostalgia as he spoke to her. "Yes, I remember," he said. "A wide-eyed kid, walking into the Hotel Chase for the first time with the Yankees... in 1924." He grinned a little wider, to help her recognize the gentle gaze, the too-far turning back of time. He was 19 in 1924.

"I had an ulcer, and the last couple of years I had aches and pains. I thought I'd never get over them," he said. "But I did." The movie stars were beginning to go on stage, for personal appearances. They, and DiMaggio, and a movie were the reward for the people whose admission prices were to be donated to Italy's Boys Towns. DiMaggio said he didn't know what he'd say. It would come to him when he stepped onto the stage.

A Diplomatic Wind-Up. He went into the spotlight, and the unrehearsed words came easily. "I've never seen so many people in St. Louis in my life," he began. "I used to play baseball here, you know, against the Browns..." He spoke of Italy's Boys Towns, but added diplomatically: "I don't agree with a lot of people, picking the Cardinals sixth or seventh. I think they have a chance for the pennant."

Watching him was the Irish priest, doing the good work in Italy. "A wonderful help to us," said the Right Rev. Msgr. John Patrick Carroll-Abbott, S.T.D., D.C.L., D.C.V.L., L.L.D., G.C.M., and Giants fan. The manager's calling card lists the degrees and honors. The baseball affiliation was given vocally. He grinned, and added, looking toward the stage, "I don't tell that to everyone."

Beumer Wins One. Rich Beumer of St. Louis, freshman pitcher at Valparaiso, Ind., University, gained a victory over University of Illinois in relief. S.4. Beumer, who replaced Starter Bob Lohse in the eighth, was tagged in the ninth for a tying home run. The Crusaders won in their half when Paul Schrage whacked a 400-foot home run smash to left-center.

Schoolmaker Receives Army Call. WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—Opening day was the last day of the season for Washington Outfielder Jerry Schoonmaker. He received orders to report to Fort Sill, Okla., on April 22.

Schoonmaker, 22-year-old bonus player from the University of Missouri, is an artillery lieutenant in the Army Reserve. He played in only 20 games last year, his first with the Senators, and batted .152.

Schoonmaker's departure cut Washington's roster to 29 men.

57 Cars Entered in 500-Mile Auto Race. INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 17 (UPI)—At least 57 racers, 11 still without drivers, will bid for the 33 starting positions in the fourth annual 500-mile Speedway auto race Memorial Day.

Seven additional nominations were announced by the management yesterday—all postmarked before the midnight April 15 deadline—and officials said there was a chance the final field may hit 60.

Two cars, including a new roadster to be driven by rookie Leroy Warriner, Indianapolis, were entered by Roy McKay, Youngstown, Ohio. Another new car was entered by Jim Travers, Beverly Hills, Calif., who master-minded the Bill Vukovich crew the past few years.

Puccinelli Dead; Played With Cards, Browns

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17 (UPI)—George C. (Pooch) Puccinelli, former major league outfielder, collapsed and died yesterday when playing golf at Harding Park course. He apparently suffered a heart attack.

Puccinelli, 48, was pronounced dead on arrival at an emergency hospital. His wife, Roma, said he had been under treatment for heart trouble.

Puccinelli broke into professional baseball with the old San Francisco Mission of the Pacific Coast League and went up to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1930. He later played for the St. Louis Browns of the American League and finished his big league career in 1936 with the Philadelphia Athletics. An injury caused him to retire.

He later played briefly with the Hollywood Stars of the Pacific Coast League before retiring from the game a second time.

Mosconi Gains 13th Straight Victory in Pocket Billiard Meet. KINSTON, N.C., April 17 (AP)—Willie Mosconi of Philadelphia set a world record here last night by winning his thirteenth straight match in pocket billiards tournament play. He defeated Irving Crane of Rochester, N.Y., 150-52.

He will attempt to make a clean sweep of the world championship tournament when he meets Jimmy Moore of Albuquerque, N.M., tonight.

In other matches, Irvin Rudolph of Sayre, Pa., defeated Richard Rigbie of Baltimore, Md., 150-107, and Moore stopped Michael Eufemia of New York City, 150-100.

Phils Sign Pilette. BROOKLYN, N.Y., April 17 (UPI)—Duane Pilette, veteran 32-year-old righthander, was signed today by the Philadelphia Phillies. Pilette worked out with the Cleveland Indians as a free agent early this spring and then joined the Phils after the Tribe turned him down.

Cards Sell Wilson, Are Down to 30 Men. CINCINNATI, April 17. THE Cardinals have only 30 players, just four more than they'll be permitted to carry, after selling Outfielder Archie Wilson to Toronto last night. The Redbirds obtained him from the same International League club last fall.

The 32-year-old Wilson, who batted .319 last year, hit .323 this spring but appeared only infrequently because of a chipped bone in his left wrist, a result of an injury suffered at St. Petersburg, Fla.

The Cards' roster now includes 12 pitchers, three catchers, nine infielders and six outfielders.

Dodgers Trade Catcher to A's. NEW YORK, April 17 (UPI)—The Kansas City Athletics have obtained Catcher Charley Thompson from the Brooklyn Dodgers for two players and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Thompson, a southpaw batter, figured as the Dodgers' No. 3 catcher but could take over as the Athletics' first-stringer. He's 30 and has had an excellent minor league record, including a .313 batting mark last year with St. Paul of the American Association.

Of other player moves: Outfielder Tom Saffell and Pitcher Roy Wheat, Saffell, 32-year-old former Pittsburgh Pirate, was dispatched at once to Portland of the Pacific Coast League. Wheat, 26-year-old righthander who had a 2-7 mark at Columbus last year, was transferred to St. Paul of the American Association.

The Athletics also optioned Catcher Wilmer Shantz to Columbus.

Suit Against I.B.C. Will Begin Thursday

NEW YORK, April 17 (UPI)—The long-awaited Government anti-trust suit against the International Boxing Club is scheduled to begin Thursday in the United States district court in New York.

The case will be heard by Judge Sylvester Ryan. There will be no jury.

The Government has charged that the I.B.C. and its president, Jim Norris, monopolizes championship fights on television through network shows on Wednesday and Friday nights.

The Government launched the anti-trust proceedings three years ago but lost when the court decided that boxing, like baseball, was not an interstate business within the meaning of the Sherman-Clayton Act. But a year ago, the United States Supreme Court overruled the lower court and decided that boxing, unlike baseball, was subject to prosecution on monopoly charges.

Seeded Players Gain Easy Victories in Houston Tennis Play. HOUSTON, Tex., April 17 (UPI)—Favorites advanced easily yesterday in the twenty-second annual River Oaks tennis tournament, as seeded players won in straight sets.

Top-seeded Vic Seixas led the way in second round action with an easy, 6-0, 6-0, victory over Alfredo Robles of Mexico City.

Bernard (Tut) Barten of Dallas, ranked fourth nationally, also won a shutout victory from Tony Trejo of the University of Houston.

Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N.J., third-seeded, beat Clayton Williams of Rice Institute, 6-1, 6-1; Gil Shea of Los Angeles won from Tom Robinson of Louisiana State University, 6-2, 6-1; Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., whipped Wallace Russell of the University of Houston, 6-0, 6-1; and Tom Brown of San Francisco beat Charles Russo of the University of Texas 6-1, 6-0, as seeded players breezed by collegiate competition.

Veteran Pollet Signs White Sox Contract. CHICAGO, April 17 (UPI)—The Chicago White Sox signed veteran southpaw Howie Pollet yesterday to help fortify their pitching corps.

Pollet worked out with the Sox during spring training as a free agent but wasn't signed to a contract until today. Manager Marty Marion needed all the pitching help he could get on the basis of the Sox's last 12 exhibition games in which the Chicagoans lost 11.

Pollet, 34, won four and lost three for the Chicago Cubs last year and has a major league lifetime record of 128 wins against 111 defeats.

Pollet's addition to the staff gave the Sox 13 pitchers and a roster of 32 players.

Illinois End's Ankle Broken in Practice. CHAMPAIGN, Ill., April 17 (INS)—Rod Hanson, a letterman end, is lost to the University of Illinois football team for the rest of the spring drill because of a broken ankle.

Hanson, a sophomore, was the Illini's number one left end last season. He suffered the broken ankle in practice yesterday.

HORSES... horses! Next Monday Sportsman's Park opens its gates for the "mutuel" benefit of every body... and that means, of course, that big time racing is up north to stay for another year. Three weeks from today, Kentucky Derby week opens at Louisville...

Within the last fortnight two horses have won at New York tracks. One was Head Man, who came from behind to beat Nail in a six-furlong sprint. The other was Career Boy, who also came from far back to win by three lengths at a mile and a sixteenth.

They will run as an entry May 5, in the eighty-second Derby as the hopes of C. V. Whitney, who never has won the Kentucky classic. In 1947 Career Boy's father, Phalanx, finished second to Jet Pilot and was running over horses at the finish.

It has been a long pull for the Whitney stable, even if it finally sends a winner to the post. Nine times, since 1931, the Whitney colors have fluttered to the Derby post... and only one other horse, Mr. Trouble (1950), ever finished in the money.

Equipose, the famous "Chocolate Soldier" of the turf, was the pre-Derby favorite in 1931, and he went lame just a few hours before the bugle call. The great filly, Top Flight, was named for the 32 running, and she went so amiss in her early training that she never even got to Churchill Downs for this fabulous race. They were two of Whitney's best.

Luck Goes Lame, Too.

REAL good horses, who make names for themselves as 4-year-olds and beyond, often don't get to Louisville. Turn to, the winter-book favorite in 1954, is an example. He went bad after winning the Flamingo at Hialeah.

"You send a horse out for a workout and he comes back a hospital case," said Sylvester Veltch, who trains the Whitney stable. "You go to bed with a good horse and you wake up to find out something has happened to him."

The way both Head Man and Career Boy are coming up to this Derby gives Veltch better than an outside chance of finally finding rainbows' end. Last August he was standing in the paddock at Saratoga, watching both horses, as two-year-olds, being saddled for the Sanford stakes. "I've got a chance," he told listeners.

"Look at that one," and he pointed to Head Man. "He has legs like Charlie Chaplin, but he can run, and the other one is a good horse, too."

A few minutes later Head Man and Career Boy had finished one-two in that order, but today the latter is the better bet at a mile and a quarter.

Like father, like son is an axiom that is never proved more true than in the Derby. In 1949 Ponder, the Calumet Farms unknown, was a veritable whirlwind in the stretch run, coming on the outside to win by three lengths.

A Family Technique.

HIS offspring, Needles, is the current Derby favorite and has won two big races this year by overtaking the field in the final quarter of a mile.

Can Career Boy run like his sire, Phalanx? In that '47 engagement Eric Guerin, on Jet Pilot, broke ahead of the field and stayed there all the way, but it took the camera to make certain that he'd finally won from Phalanx who, in the hands of Eddie Arcaro, ran like Pegasus in the last eighth of a mile. One jump past the wire and Phalanx was on top, not with too little, just too late.

While Needles and Terrang and others of Derby caliber were racing steadily through the winter, Veltch kept the Whitney string in leisurely training down in Aiken, S.C. He is a great believer in not pressing 3-year-olds too early in their first year of big-time racing. Like many trainers, he even thinks the Derby comes too soon, but it's a magic name and $100,000.

Can Head Man or Career Boy finally bring home a Whitney winner? You can spend a fortune and a lifetime trying to win the Kentucky Derby, as a man named Hal Prince Hadley will attest. He has sent 21 3-year-olds to the Maypole dance at Churchill Downs. And none of them ever got rose fever!

French Horses Early Favorites for Next June's Epsom Derby

LONDON, April 17 (AP)—French-owned thoroughbreds Philius II and Valcares III were made 100-8 betting favorites last night at a call-over by Britain's top bookmakers on the Epsom Derby to be run June 6. Valcares III is owned by Mme. Suzy Volterra who won the Epsom Classic last year with Phil Drake. Bookies made the colt joint favorite for the Derby after his success in the mile and a half Prix le Justicier at Saint Cloud.

Marcel Boussac's Philius shot into favoritism after his three lengths victory in the Prix Diebel at Maisons-Laffitte last Friday.

Complete betting odds on the Derby: Philius II, Valcares III, 100-8; Floriados 100-6; Final Court, Atlas, 100-6; Milesian, Tanerko, Rustan, Lavandin, Tenares, Dark Horizon, 20-1; Edmundo, Al-Mohannah, Dornello, Hakim-Hafiz 25-1; Spen Valley, Roistar 33-1; Dacian 40-1; Buissan Ardent, Castelmario 50-1. Others unquoted.

President Helps Open Season; Mantle Hits Two Homers

Red Faces At Dodger Flag Show

By the Associated Press

A high and outside opening pitch by President Eisenhower, a lapse of memory by the daffy Brooklyn Dodgers and two prodigious home runs by Mickey Mantle got major league baseball off to another auspicious fling today on eight fronts.

The attendance was generally excellent despite weather that put a football-like nip in the air.

The President, wearing a tan topcoat and a brown fedora, followed the presidential tradition of throwing out the first ball at Washington, where the New York Yankees opened defense of their American League championship against the Senators.

He donned a glove and let go a lobbing throw which sailed into a cluster of Yankees, who scrambled for the pellet. The ball bounced off several hands before infielder Gil McDougald came up with the prize.

The President, accompanied by House Republican Leader Joseph Martin (Rep., Massachusetts), and other high officials, then sat back to enjoy the ball game.

Mrs. Eisenhower and her mother, Mrs. John S. Doud, an avid baseball fan, had planned to attend. Changed their minds.

With two out and none on in the first inning Mantle, the Yankees' slugging centerfielder, sent a 475-foot blast over the centerfield fence, the ball landing on a gabled house across the street. He got his second hit in the sixth inning—another blow over the centerfield fence—with two on base.

It was the first time one batter hit two home runs over the long centerfield fence at Griffith Stadium in a single game.

Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, the world champion Dodgers, got off to a 36-minute delayed start, partly due to a typical Dodgerism.

The ceremonies were near completion, the Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies were standing at attention and the signal was given to the fans to rise for the playing of the National Anthem.

The band began to play, then an embarrassing pause. No singing.

Shortly, Everett McCooey, designated to sing the "Star Spangled Banner," was heard to say over the loud speaker system:

"Who's going to raise the flag?"

Officials looked around, red-faced. There was no flag raised. Finally the Marine color guard moved into position and the ceremony was completed.

Old-timers in the stands might have laughed but were not surprised. In 1913, the year Ebbets Field opened, it was recalled, the Dodgers forgot the flag.

The crowd at Brooklyn numbered around 25,000 compared with 28,500 at Washington. In both places the weather was fair but cool. An estimated 15,000 attended the New York Giants' opener against the Pittsburgh Pirates at the Polo Grounds in New York.

Illinois Prep Tourneys Drew Record Gates

CHICAGO, April 17 (AP)—Gate receipts and attendance reached an all time high for the 1956 prep basketball championships, it was announced by the Illinois High School Association.

Attendance, based on incomplete reports from district, regional, sectional and final centers, was 601,192, an increase of 24,000 over last year. Gross receipts were an estimated $420,000, an increase of about $39,000.

The breakdown on receipts: Districts—total of $27,152. Batavia again led with $2,252 followed by Clinton with $1,879 and Elgin St. Edward with $1,339.

Regionals—total $222,616. Moline tops with $9311 followed by Riverside—Brookfield with $2,273 and Crystal Lake with $8,615.

Youth Will Be Served---They Meet New Cards

The Hoemann brothers, resident in their checkered sports coats, made the most of the Chamber of Commerce's dinner at the Sheraton Jefferson for the Cardinals to get autographs from the newest members of the Redbird family. From left, HANK SAUER, KINGSLEY HOEMANN, 8, HUNTLEY HOEMANN, 7, WALKER COOPER, COURTNEY HOEMANN, 9, and ELLIS KINDER. The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Al R. Hoemann, Kirkwood.

Lost Weekend at Kansas City Is Good Omen, Mayor Tells Cards

By Neal Russo

From the time Mayor Raymond R. Tucker mentioned that he had intended to needle his Kansas City counterpart in a visit to K.C. later in the week, but had to change his plans because of what happened to the Cardinals in Kaycee, the Chamber of Commerce dinner for the Redbirds was quite a combination of ribbing and serious talk.

Besides, the Mayor said, the Cardinals' loss was a good omen. In previous spring series, Tucker pointed out, "The Browns would beat 'em and the Cards would go on to win the pennant."

With playing-for-keeps time only a few hours away, Wally Moon and Tom Alston kidded about their battle, along with Joe Cunningham, for the first base job, and Alex Grammas laughed about his struggle with Don Blasingame and Dick Schofield at shortstop.

Frank Lane, too, despite his laryngitis, quipped before a full house last night in the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel's Gold Room. All the players were introduced by Manager Fred Hutchinson and many of them spoke into the traveling microphone handled by Joe Garagiola and Jack Buck under the direction of Harry Carey.

Job on Hands. Said good-natured Alston: "I have improved in hitting, but not as much as I know I will. I know I have a little job on my hands in Wally Moon, and so does Cunningham."

Replied Moon: "Tom, the competition has been good. It really makes a good hitter out of me. I've heard that outfielders ought to pay their way into the park. Out in the outfield I had a tendency to get bored. First base, with pick-offs and bunts, keeps you sweating and ready to swing the stick."

Those refugees from the Social Security Office, Chicago branch, were quick to hop on Moon's "bored outfielder" remarks. Hank Sauer and Walker Cooper, recalling that they had whacked more than a few hard drives against the Redbirds, pointed out that Wally couldn't have been bored with all those line smashes going past him.

Catcher Cooper was asked if Pitcher Ellis Kinder, another 41-year-old, had his good stuff going yet.

Evans Pitches San Antonio to Lead in Texas

SAN ANTONIO, April 17 (UP)

—The pitchers finally began catching up with the hitters in the Texas League last night to halt temporarily at least the robust batting forays that marked the season's start.

Even the lusty-hitting Fort Worth Cats, who had hit seven home runs in their first two games, were becalmed as the Dallas Eagles' Bert Thiel stopped them 2-1. The San Antonio Missions moved to the top of the standings with a 6-2 victory over Austin, while Oklahoma City stopped Tulsa 4-4 and Houston pasted Shreveport 13-3.

Thiel, relief hurler who talked his way into a starting role, baffled the Cats with a wide variety of slow stuff and held them to five hits, but still wouldn't have won his game but for two costly Fort Worth errors that permitted his mates two unearned runs. It was champion Dallas's first victory of the young season.

Roosevelt Evans yielded Austin but four hits, struck out nine and walked eight as he pitched San Antonio to its third victory in four starts against the Senators. A three-run homer by Rookie Centerfielder Don Moitz helped his cause along.

Lefty Duane Wilson checked Tulsa with only five hits, but had to have relief with one out in the ninth from veteran Ernie Groth as Oklahoma City stood off Tulsa and gained an even split in their four-game set. Josie Heard of the Oilers hurled three-hit ball in 6½ innings of relief, but a six-run Indian burst in the first inning off Jim Speer was too much of

Hawks to Get Macauley? It's Rumor in East

BOSTON, April 17 (AP)

Speculation of a trade between the Boston Celtics and the St. Louis Hawks arose today after a conference between officials of the two National Basketball Assn. clubs.

Owner Walter Brown and Coach Red Auerbach of the Celtics and Coach Red Holzman of the Hawks met behind closed doors yesterday, setting off the trade talk.

Although the three had nothing to say after the meeting, there was speculation that a key figure in a possible deal would be Easy Ed Macauley, who has been with the Celtics for six years.

Macauley, a graduate of St. Louis University, lives in St. Louis. He was indefinite about his plans when asked recently whether he would be back with the Celtics next season.

299 Game for Wurth When No. 6 Pin Stands

How close can you come to a 300 game in bowling and still miss was a question John Wurth could answer today after his 299 game yesterday at Ray Holmes Bowl.

Wurth, rolling with the Division of the Bowling Proprietors' Traveling League, opened with games of 204 and 178. He then bowled 11 straight strikes. On his twelfth ball he knocked over all but the No. 6 pin, giving him 299 and a three-game total of 881.

In spite of Wurth's good series, his team lost two games to the Ray Holmes quintet which was led by Holmes who had a 677 total, including a 265 game.

In other matches, Magdalen won the odd game from the Brentwoods and Palace Bowl swept its three games with the Cherokees.

Others among top four: Harold Drake, 689; Tim Marcellan, 687; Jerry Tharp, 674. High scratch singles—J. Fink, 236; C. Shimkus, 242. High three—Bill Holmes, 594, and Ken Wallis, 586. A field of 105 bowlers competed.

Philadelphia Gets 1957 Army, Irish Football Renewal

NEW YORK CITY, April 17 (AP)

"N town" that prides itself in doing things bigger and better than any place else, has lost its bid for the renewal of the colorful Army-Notre Dame football series because it isn't big enough.

Philadelphia, with its 100,000-seat Municipal Stadium and a gross gate expected to top the best New York could offer of $190,000, will get the game instead. The Quaker City also has been the site of recent Army-Navy games.

Game time is Oct. 12, 1957—ending a ten-year break in the football rivalry between the two institutions.

Yankee Stadium, with a maximum capacity of 74,000, was the site New York had to offer, but Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, superintendent of the United States Military Academy, said he "reluctantly" had to choose Philadelphia because of greater seating capacity and the prospect of greater revenue.

Red Sox Close

The Boston Red Sox were only three games off the American League lead last Sept. 8.

Moore Scores 3-Round Kayo

SEATTLE, April 17 (UP)

Light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore toyed with George Parmentier, a lumbering lumberjack from Eureka, Calif., for two rounds here last night and then knocked him out at 2:34 of the third round.

Moore went into the ring at 193 pounds, 30 pounds lighter than the 6-8 California heavy-weight.

Moore had no trouble at all outboxing his heavier opponent during the first two rounds.

"Come on, show me something," Archie kept saying to Parmentier.

Early in the third round Moore decked Parmentier with a short right to the jaw. He knocked him down the second time with the same type of punch and also scored the knockout with a short right. Moore will defend his title in June against Yoland Pompey in England.

Second Ace for Chuck Taylor

Charles (Chuck) Taylor scored the second ace of his golfing career when he dropped a five-iron shot on the 175-yard, No. 10 hole at Crystal Lake. Taylor, who played in a threesome with Les Goll and John Wachter, had an 82 for 18 holes.

Machen Upsets Nino Valdes in 10-Round Bout

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17 (UP)

Eddie Machen, boxing around the ring like a game-cock, crashed into the big-time heavy-weight picture last night by scoring a unanimous 10-round upset victory over Nino Valdes of Cuba before a wildly partisan crowd of about 6000 at the Cow Palace.

Machen rolled up his points by scoring often from the outside with left hooks to the head which made the cumbersome dockworker from Havana blink. Machen, who now is undefeated in 13 professional fights, weighed 193, 19 pounds less than the towering Valdes who came in at 212.

Valdes never did begin to get untracked until the last round when he suddenly staggered his Redding, Calif., opponent with a solid left hook to the head. Machen had to hang on for the rest of the session.

Judge Toby Irwin scored it for Machen 56½ to 53½. Judge Fred Apostoli, 56 to 54, and Referee Jack Downey, 55½ to 54½.

For the 31-year-old Valdes it was his fourth loss in his last six fights.

Machen scored effectively at the end of the sixth and seventh rounds. After the bell ended the sixth, he caught Valdes with a right to the head and then he surprised the Cuban with a left hook to the head after the seventh round ended, but no points were deducted by Downey.

Machen's left hooks were his best shots although he often got in a solid right to Valdes' jaw.

Tom Gola Called Up For Army Physical

PHILADELPHIA, April 17 (AP)

Tom Gola, rock basketball star for the Philadelphia Warriors and a three-time All-America at LaSalle College, was called up for his draft physical today.

Gola helped the Warriors win their first National Basketball Association title in 10 years, scoring 732 points during the pro season.

Gola, whose height has been listed variously at 6-6 and 6-7, injured his back while in high school. That may cause his deferment, although it doesn't affect his playing ability. Also, the services usually reject anyone taller than 6-6.

Choate Hurls East St. Louis To 9-1 Victory

The baseball race has hardly begun yet every member of the seven-team Southwestern Illinois Conference has already been defeated. Each team has lost once and East St. Louis and Granite City share the lead because they have two victories apiece.

Granite's first defeat came last night at Jones Park in East St. Louis, where Coach Pick Dehner's squad won, 9 to 1. Don Choate, who plays in every game for the East Siders and pitches in most, held Granite to three hits and struck out 14 batters in the top heavy triumph.

Two other Southwestern Illinois Conference games were postponed. East St. Louis jumped off to four runs in the first inning off of Granite's Bill Diak and there was little doubt of the outcome after that. It was 7-0 before the Warriors pushed across a run in the fourth on Ed Lenzie's single and Dallen Maxville's triple.

It was the second time this season that East St. Louis has beaten Granite City, owning a 10-3 victory over the Warriors' other regular starter, Ron Parker, in a practice game two weeks ago.

Choate, who often leads East St. Louis at bat as well as from the mound, had only one hit yesterday but drove in three runs. Rich Brooks also drove in three with a home run and a single. Charlie Cooper, Ron Henson, Jerry Jarrett and Mel Roustio also contributed two hits each to the East Siders' cause.

26 Qualifying Tests for U.S. Open Scheduled

NEW YORK, April 17 (UP)—The United States Golf Association today set up 26 qualifying sections, one more than last year, to fill 144 of the 162 berths available for its 1956 Open championship at Rochester, N.Y., June 14-16.

All the sectional rounds will be conducted at 36 holes medal play on June 4 except for the Honolulu sectional, which will be held May 28.

There are 20 players who are exempt from sectional qualifying. They include: The last five open winners—Cary Middlecoff, Ben Hogan, Julius Boros, Ed Furgol and Jack Fleck; the 1955 United States amateur champion—Harvie Ward; the 1955 P.G.A. champion—Doug Ford; the 1955 British Open Champion—Peter Thomson of Australia; the 1955 British amateur champion—Joe Conrad of San Antonio, Tex.; and Charles McKenna, the host professional at the Oak Hill Country Club of Rochester.

St. Louis Test at Westwood. The 10 lowest scores and those tying for tenth in the 1955 open, including any of the last five individuals to win (Fleck, Hogan and Boros), also are exempt. Ford and Ward also are in this group. The others are Sam Snead, Tommy Bolt, Bob Rosburg, Bud Hoelcher, Mike Souchak, Jack Burke, Frank Stranahan and Shelley Mayfield.

Fleck won the 1955 title when he defeated Hogan in a play-off at San Francisco.

The St. Louis tryouts will be held at Westwood Country Club.

The U. S. G. A. announced various minor changes in the sectional qualifying program. Three meets have been set up in the Metropolitan New York area, where only one was held last year. One will be on Long Island, one in northern New Jersey and the other in Westchester county. In addition, there will be a round at Rochester, N.Y., which was not represented in 1955, and a round has been added at Nashville, Tenn.

The following shifts in qualifying sites also have been made: Dunedin, Fla., instead of West Palm Beach; Atlanta, Ga., instead of Birmingham, Ala.; Baltimore, Md., instead of Washington, D.C.; Falmouth, Mass., instead of Manchester, Mass.; Morganton, N.C., instead of Fayetteville, N.C.; and Dallas instead of Fort Worth, Tex. Tournaments at Phoenix, Ariz.; Portland, Ore.; and Salt Lake City, Utah, were eliminated.

$6000 to the Winner.

The professionals will play for a total purse of $25,000 with $6000 going to the top professional. Every pro who returns a 72-hole score will receive at least $200. Each amateur who returns a 72-hole score will receive a gold medal.

Entry applications, including those of entrants who are exempt from qualifying, must arrive at the U.S.G.A. office in New York not later than 5 p.m., May 18. John D. Ames of Chicago is chairman.

Last year there were 1522 entries.

Schedule of sectional qualifying rounds: May 28—Honolulu. June 4—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Dunedin, Fla., Atlanta, Chicago, New Orleans, Baltimore, Falmouth, Mass., Detroit, Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Summit, N.J., Long Island (two courses), Rochester, Rye, N.Y., Morganton, N.C., Cincinnati, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Nashville, Dallas and Seattle.

Walcott Heard, Makes No Case For Grand Jury

CHICAGO, April 17 (AP)—Alleged irregularities in Illinois boxing were termed "wild statements" yesterday in a grand jury investigation.

Appearing before the Cook county (Chicago) grand jury were former Heavyweight Champion Jersey Joe Walcott and former fight Manager Jack Begun. Both men met with State's Attorney John Gutknecht before testifying before the jury.

"It is evident that the statements made recently (by Walcott and Begun) in connection with the boxing game are wild statements," said Gutknecht. "No factual information was brought to the State's Attorney's attention.

"Unless other witnesses volunteer that they have knowledge of actual corruption in the Cook county or Illinois boxing game, there is no action that can be taken at this time."

Walcott last week said he felt boxing should be "cleaned up." He made his statement while appearing on a local television show in connection with his promotional work for a boxing movie in which he has a role.

The former champion and Louis Radzienda, a member of the Illinois Athletic Commission and president of the National Boxing Association, engaged in an argument, on the show, over alleged crookedness in boxing.

Begun had written in a Chicago amusement circular that the award of the welterweight title to Johnny Saxton in a bout with Carmen Basilio March 14 was a "phony decision."

Gutknecht said Begun had no evidence to support his statements made in the article about the Saxton-Basilio fight.

"I know nothing of corruption in boxing in Chicago or Cook county," Walcott told newsmen. "But you can read in the newspapers that there are bad things in boxing in all major cities throughout the United States."

Braves Sign Pair.

MILWAUKEE, April 17 (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves signed two rookies to farm team contracts at their Waycross, Ga., minor league training base. They were outfielder Charlie White, 20 years old, of Hampton, N.J., and shortstop Tino Cardarelli, 21, of Chester, Mass.

White signed with Quebec in the Class C Provincial League and Cardarelli with Lawton, Okla., in the Class D Sooner State League.

Nervous Prince at Wedding Rehearsal

21-Gun Salutes Set Off Wedding Pageant for Miss Kelly, Rainier

Festivities to Continue Non-Stop Until Civil Ceremony Tomorrow — All-Night Dancing in Streets.

MONACO, April 17 (UP)—Visiting warships, small ones to fit Monaco's tiny harbor, thundered 21-gun salutes today to Prince Rainier and to Grace Kelly.

The international naval salute opened Monaco's wedding pageant that works up during the day to all-night dancing in the streets.

A series of jewel robberies that sent Rainier's police on a cops and robbers chase along the suddenly sun-swept Riviera caused some embarrassment to the Prince.

Rainier called in New York detective Frank Cresci, his personal wedding guest, and four French inspectors to halt the thieves who stole $50,000 in jewels from two guests and perpetrated two other minor incidents.

Bridegroom Robbed.
The latest jewel victim was Mrs. Marce Pamp, a wealthy Philadelphia, who is one of Miss Kelly's bridesmaids.

Thieves stole from $500 to $10,000 in gems from her suite in the Hotel de Paris.

Philadelphia publisher Matthew McCloskey lost jewels valued at $45,000 to $50,000 from the same hotel Friday night.

McCloskey disclosed today one other incident had occurred at the Hotel de Paris and another at the nearby Hotel Hermitage, but he said the losses in both cases were believed negligible.

One of the cases was thought to be a $10 theft from the purse of a nurse who surprised a prowler in her room.

Rainier renewed friendly relations with the press and unlocked the palace gates to them this afternoon.

Two photographers from each country represented in the press corps were invited into the palace to take pictures of Miss Kelly and the Prince posing with wedding guests.

Sunny Weather Predicted.
The sun burst forth this morning, ending four days of rain. The weatherman said prospects were good for continuing sunny skies.

It was a non-stop program from now till the civil wedding at 11 a.m. tomorrow (4 a.m. St. Louis time).

The religious ceremony uniting Miss Kelly and the Prince is at 10:30 a.m. Thursday (4:30 a.m. St. Louis time) in Monaco's St. Nicholas Cathedral.

Miss Kelly last night gave a palace party for her bridesmaids. The six bridesmaids and two matrons of honor chipped in and bought Grace a wedding present—a six-piece silver dressing set. Miss Kelly gave each of her bridesmaids a pearl and gold bracelet with a gold medallion engraved on one side with the cypher "RG" for Rainier and Grace, and on the other with the wedding date in French: "19 Avril 1956."

PRO-STALINISTS IN TIFLIS TRIED TO GET WORD TO U.N.

TIFLIS, Soviet Georgia, April 16 (AP)—Students attempted to send a telegram to the United Nations during pro-Stalin demonstrations in this Georgian capital a month ago, eyewitnesses reported today.

They said up to 300 persons were hurt and there was talk of tanks and armored cars being called out.

Iragli J. Tchikhashvili, editor of the big Communist party newspaper, Dawn of the East, said, however, reports of shooting were "all nonsense."

Asked about reports that students took over control of the capital for five days, Tchikhashvili said: "Oh, no. No such thing was going on."

Associated Press correspondent Roy Essayan, who wrote the above story, is in Tiflis with a group of western newsmen. They are the first western correspondents permitted to visit the capital of Soviet Georgia since reports of pro-Stalin demonstrations there.

FALSTAFF CORP. PURCHASES BREWERY AT EL PASO, TEX.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
EL PASO, Tex., April 17—Falstaff Brewing Corp. has purchased the Harry Mitchell Brewing Co. of El Paso, Joseph Griesedieck, president of Falstaff, announced yesterday.

The purchase was approved by Mitchell stockholders in a meeting here Saturday. The El Paso brewery has an annual capacity of 150,000 barrels.

The Mitchell concern has a five-story brew house, a two-story stock house, two warehouse buildings, two office buildings, a bottle shop, garage and advertising warehouse. Falstaff gave $1,500,000 in 4½ per cent subordinated debentures for the brewery.

NEW COLLECTIVE DICTATORSHIP OF REDS IS WORKING

The speech which Khrushchev made at a secret session of the twelfth Congress of the Communist party denouncing Stalin, Bohlen and other western ambassadors first heard about the speech on March 9 as rumors of it began to leak out of regional party meetings where the lesser fry were instructed in the new line.

Of the personalities involved in the shift, that of Khrushchev remains the most interesting. Like the others now comprising this collective dictatorship—with the exception of Molotov—he represents for the first time at the top of the proletarian with no relationship to the bourgeois past. He had his first formal education at the age of 27.

Those who have followed his rise closely say that he has a sloganic mind. That is to say, he believes the slogans parroted over and over again about the "slavery" endured by western workers and the "freedom" enjoyed under Communism.

Rising in the new hierarchy is Marshal Zhukov, representing the new authority of the military. Zhukov is a leading candidate for the presidency. Reports that the military has achieved a power equal to that of the top bureaucrats are believed, however, to be exaggerated.

PARTY SCHOOL ROLE INTENDED TO BOOST NIXON

which the President and Nixon will address is one of Hall's devices for coping with the specialized Eisenhower presidency. Hall's Mahomet will not go to the political mountains, as Hall brings them to him.

If the G.O.P. politicians were in a position to complain that they must make all the journeys, no doubt they would. It is not pleasing to them that the President does not seem to care for their company in his hours of ease but joins with his business friends at golf clubs.

But they know he is far more popular than his party. All the elections since 1952 have made that very clear. So they obey a Hall summons to gather around for pep meetings with the President, fully understanding that they must do the operating and keep their candidate happy.

Kellogg's discovers a great new protein food

This intent lady is reading the most nutritious cereal story of our time. You can read about it on the back of the Special K package.

Concentrated high-quality protein in a delicious new ready-to-eat cereal form

LIKE most of us these days, this young mother is well aware that the key to her family's good health is protein—and plenty of it.

She knows that high-quality protein is the foundation of balanced meals. That it helps her youngsters to grow strong and sturdy... keeps grownups going longer without a letdown.

And now—with Kellogg's Special K—she can start herself and her family out in the morning with the kind of protein they need: concentrated high-quality protein in a delicious new ready-to-eat cereal form.

Special K was developed in collaboration with nutritionists from two leading American universities. It took four years to find a way to combine protein-rich grains with the valuable properties in other foods (including milk and yeast). The result is a new food with more high-quality protein than any other leading cereal—hot or cold. And twice their average.

With so many health-giving properties, including substantial amounts of all the vitamins you need most, you're probably wondering what Special K tastes like. We can assure you that it is unusually tempting to eat. In fact your whole family will enjoy it not only for breakfast, but any time they want wholesome food fast.

The proof of that is in the package with the big, red "K" on it at your grocer's. We invite you to try it—especially if your family hasn't been eating cereals too frequently.

Special K, for all its extraordinary health benefits, costs only about 4½¢ for a generous one-ounce serving. And where else could you get so much high-quality protein for so little money?

Kellogg's OF BATTLE CREEK

 Expectant mothers require far more protein than usual. Kellogg's Special K provides high-quality protein that helps assure a healthy baby. Also more nutritional benefits than any well-known cereal.	 Fast-growing youngsters need up to twice as much protein as grown-ups. They need high-quality protein—the kind in Special K—to build sturdy bodies, good red blood.
 Weight watchers will appreciate this: Kellogg's Special K has more high-quality protein than any other well-known cereal, yet an average (1 ounce) serving contains only 105 calories.	 Mature adults find protein helps them lead active lives years longer. Special K's high-quality protein is easily digested and its inviting flavor helps stir lagging appetites.

YUGOV, VETERAN RED LEADER, NEW BULGARIA PREMIER

BELGRADE, April 17 (AP) — The Bulgarian Parliament today named Anton Yugov the new Communist Premier to succeed Vulko Chervenkov, who was accused by his associates of practicing Stalin-like one-man rule.

Yugov, 62-year-old former tobacco worker and oldest member of the Bulgarian Communist Politburo, was elected after Parliament had accepted Chervenkov's resignation.

The reports said the resignation of Chervenkov—premier since 1950—was accepted unanimously by the Assembly at the beginning of the session. The resignation was submitted yesterday.

At the beginning of World War II, Yugov was arrested by the pro-Nazi Bulgarian government. He escaped and fought in a Bulgarian anti-Nazi partisan unit.

Chervenkov's removal was a victory for President Josip (Tito) Broz of Yugoslavia. Chervenkov was a leader of the anti-Titoist campaign in the Soviet orbit.

$11,000,000 TRADE DEAL BY EGYPT AND RED CHINA

CAIRO, April 17 (AP)—Egypt and Red China concluded trade transactions yesterday amounting to more than $11,000,000. A Chinese trade delegation has been here for six weeks negotiating the deal under a three-year trade agreement signed last August in Peiping.

A communique announced the Red Chinese were giving Egypt $200,000 worth of Chinese products currently being displayed in a trade exhibition in Cairo. Under the agreement, the communique added, China bought large quantities of Egyptian cotton textiles while Egypt bought vegetable oils, machinery and steel equipment.

LOWER STOCK CLOSE ON LATE SELL-OFF

Steels and Oils Lead List for Time — Market Most Time Mixed.

NEW YORK, April 17 (AP)—The stock market closed lower today as a result of a late sell-off.

Steels and oils led the market higher throughout a portion of the day, but the list was mixed most of the time.

In final phases of trading, all divisions subsided from their best, including steels and oils. The market at its best pushed gains to around 4 points, losses ran into around 3 at the outside.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 70 cents at $188.50. The industrial component lost 80 cents, rails were off 60 cents, and utilities declined 20 cents.

Dow-Jones average of 20 industrial stocks was 120 points lower at 507.95 at the close. The 20 rails dropped .32 of a point to 127.57 and the 15 utilities slipped .05 to 66.23.

The list narrowed to 1166 individual issues traded, of which 408 advanced and 497 declined with 69 new highs and 59 new lows for the year.

Trading interest waned as the baseball season got underway, but for the day business amounted to 2,350,000 shares compared with 2,310,000 shares yesterday.

London stocks were lower today, the Financial Times index gaining 1.8 points at 188.0.

The steels and oils provided some buying incentive, but the market refused to follow along.

Aircrafts were lower. Lockheed was an exception with a gain of around a point as the company unveiled its starfighter jet.

Motors were mixed with Chrysler lower as the annual meeting was told that first quarter profits would be lower than a year ago.

Non-ferrous metals were mostly lower, but Phelps Dodge was higher as the company told stockholders at the annual meeting that 1956 could be a record year for profits.

ATOMIC AGE DESTROYER

Sleek, curving lines of Canada's radically new anti-submarine destroyer, the St. Laurent, loom impressively above the quay as the 2600-ton warship docked at Washington, D. C., yesterday. The destroyer had just completed trials with United States Navy units off Key West, Fla. One of the fastest warships of its type, the St. Laurent contains large amounts of Canadian-produced aluminum in its structure for greater lightness, durability and speed.

SCIENCE FAIR PREPARATIONS

General view in the Washington University Field House yesterday as elementary and high school students of the St. Louis area set up their exhibits in preparation for tonight's opening of the ninth annual Greater St. Louis Science Fair. ## DEDICATING MILITARY RECORDS CENTER

Concrete and glass structure of the new Military Personnel Records Center, 9700 Page avenue, Overland, forms an imposing backdrop as Maj. Gen. John A. Klein (at microphone), Assistant General of the Army, speaks at dedication ceremony of the new building today. The six-story structure, built at a cost of $15,000,000, houses 35,000,000 records of Army, Navy and Air Force veterans. It is considered one of the 20 largest buildings in the world, second only to the Pentagon in Washington, D. C., in total floor space, 1,300,000 square feet. Principal speaker at today's ceremony was Hugh M. Milton II, Assistant Secretary of the Army in charge of manpower and reserve forces.

In Hollywood

By Sheila Graham

ALFRID HITCHCOCK is having some official problems in New York shooting his Henry Fonda-Vera Miles starrer, "The Wrong Man," and he's bringing them all back to Hollywood to complete the picture. It's the New Yorker story of the Stork Club waiter who was wrongfully convicted and jailed and the police are not crazy about the idea of a movie being made of it.

SHEILAH GRAHAM

In Hollywood? . . . Well, Terry Moore is still here, for a while, riding around town in the new car given her by hubby Gene McGrath.

INGRID BERGMAN and Yul Brynner will make part of "Anastasia" in Copenhagen. Also London and Paris. The picture starts in June. . . . Yvonne De Carlo can afford to have two babies—she has a backlog of four unreleased pictures to see her through the next 18 months.

Orson Welles is dicker with the major studios here to release his European picture, "Confidential Report." And what a cast! In addition to Orson, there's Katina Paxinou, Akim Tamiroff, Mischa Auer, and the spy thriller introduces his new wife as the romantic lead. Orson is being very domestic and his wife and the baby are here with him at the hotel. . . . There was great excitement in Mandeville canyon when Dick Widmark's horse went on a rampage. It was finally lassoed and brought to a standstill.

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD new screen idol Sal Mineo is having a tough time in the Rocky Graziano movie at Metro. He plays a 26-year-old and has to smoke, but the welfare worker, obligatory on the set for those under 18 years of age, won't let him. The only other student in his classes is 5 years old, and Sal says the teacher talks to them both the same way.

Jess White is wrestling over a decision between the lead in the road company of "No Time for Sergeants," and some song-and-dance stuff in "The Best Things in Life Are Free" at Twentieth-Fox. "I'd like to do the play but hate to leave Hollywood for a year," says Jess.

Dan Dailey and wife Gwenn moved into their new 10-acre ranch in Northridge, with lots of stables for Dan's horses, a 38-foot living room, and a swimming pool. Cost Daniel more than $100,000.

THE RKO-PATHE COMMISSARY is packed every day for lunch, mostly with men. Reason? Anita Ekberg dines there regularly while making "Back From Eternity." The beautiful Ekberg will be queen of the Palm Springs desert circus celebration, which should raise the heat of that desert resort a few notches.

Frank Sinatra wrote Ava Gardner, according to a friend, asking if and when she ever intended picking up her divorce decree, and she answered they could talk about it when he arrived in Spain for "The Pride and the Passion."

Fatherhood Study

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

CARTOONISTS never cease caricaturing the father waiting at the hospital for the arrival of a new baby, and innumerable jokes suggest that at such times his behavior is not altogether sane. But perhaps his difficulties, if he has any, really appear a long time before his wife goes into the delivery room. James L. Curtis, a psychiatrist attached to the United States Air Force, studied 55 expectant fathers and found that most of them showed severe strain.

DR. PAUL POPENOE

posed of 14 men with minor problems. Group C was a normal control group of 24 expectant fathers.

"THE MEN in groups B and C much more clearly than in group A developed complaints which were very similar to the complaints of pregnant women," Dr. Curtis reports in the Air Force Medical Journal of July 1955. "Several men developed gastro-intestinal symptoms which were typical of 'morning sickness,' as soon as their wives became pregnant. Less commonly, a sharp increase in appetite, similar to 'eating for two,' was seen."

The men themselves were seldom aware that their recent problems had any relations to their approaching fatherhood. Unknowingly, they were affected nevertheless. Of the unstable men in group A, 15 men were openly rejecting in their attitude toward the expected baby. Two tried to commit suicide.

IN THE NORMAL GROUP C of 24 men who might be expected to behave like other young fathers, two-thirds presented "symptoms" of one kind or another. But on the whole, they had a stable image of themselves as a capable and loving father figure. The men in group B had less of this. The men in group A weren't able to think of themselves as good fathers at all.

Women have sometimes concentrated on their own problems in pregnancy so exclusively that they have forgotten what we men have to go through. We ought to have more attention, sympathy and understanding, and oh, how we do love sympathy, attention and understanding!

Tips for Teens

By Elinor Williams

ALL "What shall I do?" questions from high schoolers aren't about dates. Some are about teachers and friends. . . . as in this letter from a girl:

"I take piano lessons and some times my teacher takes me to his house for my lesson. He picks me up and then takes me home. He comes to my house, comes in, escorts me out and opens the car door for me. My question is this—When we arrive at his house, should I wait in the car until he gets out and opens the door, or at my age, should I open the door myself and get out? I am 13; he is in the twenties. Also, when I am walking with a friend and I say 'Hello' to somebody she does not know, what should she do . . . smile, speak or just do nothing? In this case, there isn't time for an introduction."

Answer—It's always correct for a girl or woman to wait for her escort to open the car door for her when she gets out—unless, perhaps, the man is very elderly and she is much younger.

When you and your girl friend meet a friend of yours whom she doesn't know—and you just say "Hello" without stopping—she should do nothing. There's no need for her to speak or smile when she doesn't know the person.

If your friend knows who the person is, however, it would be friendly to smile, although they're not really acquainted. Nothing else is necessary.

Passage to Freedom in Indochina

Book by Lt. Thomas A. Dooley
Of St. Louis Describes Ordeal
Of Refugees Fleeing Communists

By Clarissa Start

IT was in the spring of 1955, in the dying city of Haiphong, north Viet Nam, that Lt. Thomas A. Dooley lay, sleepless and sweltering, asking himself the question that has haunted many young Americans in far-away places, "What in hell am I doing here?"

A 28-year-old Navy doctor, Dooley had no lack of patients.

At that moment there were 12,000 sick and maimed who had fled the Communists and were living in the 140 tents in a quagmire he had named Camp de la Pagode. An American only mildly interested in the fall of Dien Bien Phu—and that only because he had studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and was interested in anything French, he was helping evacuate half a million Vietnamese in that Indochina area. A student who recalled tropical diseases as "a drowsy course," he was becoming an expert in malaria, leprosy, cholera, smallpox.

He was also facing problems not in the textbooks. What to do for children who have had chopsticks driven into their inner ears? Or for old women whose brittle collar bones have been shattered by rifle bullets? Or a priest who has had nails driven into his skull as a mock Crown of Thorns? How to provide food, shelter, sanitation for people instilled with terror of Americans? It was a big job for a young man who, he admits, had once been tagged by his St. Louis University professors as a future "society doctor."

Dooley, the son of Mrs. Thomas A. Dooley, 4402 McPherson avenue, has since received the highest award of South Viet Nam for his work with the refugees and has written a book, "Deliver Us From Evil" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy) about his experiences. On terminal leave from the Navy, he will live in Washington, D.C., and is planning to return to Indochina as a civilian in a Mobile Medical Unit. At present Dooley is on a lecture tour, which he interrupted to go to Hollywood to consult with Kirk Douglas concerning the filming of his book.

Next Tuesday, Lt. Dooley is due to arrive in St. Louis to visit his mother, and on Sunday, April 29, will address the convention of the Council of Catholic Women of the St. Louis Archdiocese at Rosati-Kain High School Auditorium. A dramatic, moving story with incidents of horror and bravery, lightened by the humor which sometimes cropped up in his grimy, serious job, the book should make a good movie. Lt. Dooley tells his story simply, as it happened.

Described by his mother as "the kind of person who always seems to be around where things are happening," Thomas A. Dooley III was one of four sons. His older brother, Earle, was killed in action in Germany in World War II. A younger brother, Malcolm, lives here, at 8802 Eager road, and the youngest one, Edward, is a paratrooper in Germany. Their father, who was district manager of the American Car and Foundry Co., died seven years ago.

Lt. Dooley attended St. Louis University High, Notre Dame University, St. Louis University Medical School, and the Sorbonne, before he became a Navy doctor.

He first went to Indochina as part of the advance guard of Operation Passage to Freedom, the largest evacuation ever undertaken by the United States Navy. In August, 1954, the U.S. Montague, converted from cargo transport to passenger liner, picked up the first refugees, a depressing group, from infants to aged, sick, filthy and terrified. They had been told the Americans were devoted to cleanliness; that they amputated the hands of anyone who dared be seafish; that American sailors roasted and ate small children; they had "true pictures" to prove it.

It was a voyage which ranged from treating dread diseases to teaching the passengers that the latrines were not bathtubs for the babies. The sailors not only abstained from the time-honored Navy custom of complaining, endured filth and stench, but served as baby sitters and maids of all work. As an experiment in human relations, the first evacuation was a success. The old man, first refugee on board, who shrank from a helping hand, alighted, smiling at the Americans and smoking a cigarette. Dooley writes:

"Before turning in, I stood on the deck congratulating myself on being a Navy doctor. 'Dooley,' I said to myself, 'You've seen and done things that are out of this world, but you'll never have another experience to top this one in your whole lifetime."

"That's what I thought." From there he went to Haiphong; he was to serve as medical officer and interpreter because he could speak French. He had studied everything in college, he recalls from Aristotle to zoology, but no course in refugee camp building. This was his first job. There were 150,000 refugees living under shelter improvised from rice mats and plastic rain covers. The colony was "scarcely a love story to the eyes and certainly no treat to the nose."

THEIR primary job, once the camp was set up, was to de-louse, inoculate and process for evacuation. Dooley wrote that there were 300 to 400 deaths per day in need of medical treatment. Dooley sought permission to treat the sick rather than returning them to the Communists because they could not be evacuated. He had to secure much of his medicine and supplies by scrounging and begging from nearby ships. In a letter from Adm. Lorenzo S. Sabin commending him on receiving the Legion of Merit, later on, Sabin wrote, "The Book says the Lord will help those who help themselves, and it seems to me, that in the evacuation of Indochina you, Dr. Dooley, several times managed to give the Lord a nudge."

Even so, they soon ran out of supplies. Dooley wrote to American drug companies which contributed thousands of dollars worth of tetracycline and penicillin, to an airline which sent 10,000 bars of soap—"the decadent capitalist system," he points out, came through only.

They set up a laboratory which "didn't look like Bethesda Medical Center but was functional."

He imagines even today there would be a buzz-noising at the writing of a book about his experiences with the amazing Americans and their incredible custom of collecting everything from stool specimens to rats, pony-sized ones which they combed for fleas.

Because the fear that the Communist Viet-minh might "liberate" Haiphong, most of the Americans were moved out. Dooley was left with three corpsmen, Dennis Shepard, Pete Kessell and Norman Baker, for the last eight months.

Every day was a parade of misery which began at 5 a.m. and went on into the night. A constant problem was that the refugees, like those on the ship, feared the bacteriological warfare which they had been told the Americans would inflict and every routine vaccination was a hassle. The men found they had to sell America; everything they gave they described in the Vietnamese phrase meaning, "This is American aid." Even so, they were accused by the Communists of poisoning the water, sterilizing the refugees, kidnapping evacuees. One day a mother whose baby responded to a shot of penicillin by breaking out in hives took after Dooley with a club and left him with broken ribs.

From the refugees, the Americans learned what life under Communism had been like. The land reforms which produced famine, the suppression of religion, through closing churches, killing priests, torturing believers. At Bao Lac, the Vietminh had a custom of tearing an ear partially off children as a penalty for the crime of listening to evil words. The evil words were, "Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name." By the time the mutilated youngsters reached Dooley, amputation was necessary. Only from one ear could they ever again hear words, evil or holy.

Dooley, a Catholic, was impressed at how the people had remained steadfast to religion and how they clung to a religious object as they last remaining possession. He kept thinking, however, of the thousands who could not escape.

EVERY day Haiphong died a little. More shops and houses were deserted, more pro-Vietminh moved in, clashes became more frequent. Finally on May 4, 1955, the Communists moved in and the last refugees were evacuated. Not the last, he emphasizes, as millions remain behind the Bamboo Curtain but, he says, "We had done the best we could." One of his last acts was to help smuggle a statue of Our Lady of Fatima out of the village church to make the Passage to Freedom.

A six-footer, Dooley had gone down in weight from 180 to 120 pounds. At the hospital in Japan he was given the order: special diet, rest and "write a book."

Along with his book, he has been telling the story of the gallant Vietnamese wherever possible. In San Diego, he relates, he spoke to a high school where the youngsters quelled their wolf whistles and feet stamping to listen and ask serious questions. At the end of the program, a 13-year-old girl came up the aisle, removed a wad of gum from her mouth and asked, "What can we really do to help improve the social, economic and political situation in Southeast Asia?"

It is a question he's been asked many times, Dooley says, and he admits he has no magic formula to offer. He does feel that American aid creates bonds of friendship especially when it is used by individuals. He feels we should "stop being afraid to speak of compassion, and generosity." And he thinks that perhaps the best advice can be summed up in three words which Christ spoke: "Love one another."

My Day

Support for Stevenson At Meeting

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK.

THE trip to Pittsfield, Mass., Sunday afternoon was far shorter than I anticipated. Mrs. Charles Fayerweather and I had a very pleasant dinner at the hotel with organizers of the meeting and quite large groups of young Democrats from Williams and Bennington Colleges. It was interesting to find a number of the regular Democratic organization present, as well as a large group of Stevenson supporters, some of whom are independents and some Democrats who have supported Stevenson since 1952. They told me that in 1952 Pittsfield had given him as big a vote as they had given Democratic Senator John F. Kennedy. This was encouraging news. Evidently the feeling for Stevenson is as strong as it was then, judging from what the organizers of the meeting told me.

They allowed me to leave as soon as I had finished speaking so that I reached home far earlier than I had expected. And I left Hyde Park Monday morning at 7:30 for New York.

I COULD NOT HELP being interested in the artist's conception of a project for the development of Lincoln Square which appeared in the newspaper.

This project would bring together, in one central area of New York City, the Metropolitan Opera, the Philharmonic, the Juilliard School of Music and other related and educational facilities. It seemed to me an ambitious plan but a rather delightful one, and perhaps some day the city will develop along these lines.

ISRAEL celebrated its Independence Day and its 60-year-old Prime Minister, David Ben-Gurion, in his speech to the citizens of this young nation, recalled to me how Weston Churchill during World War II spoke to the citizens of the British Isles.

I know the spirit which Ben-Gurion expressed exists not only in the Prime Minister but in the people of Israel. But I wish he had given some recognition of the fact that the Secretary General of the United Nations is at present in the Middle East and is doing all he can to bring about peaceful solutions.

I have hopes that this mission may be a successful one. Perhaps the expression of determination, such as Ben-Gurion voiced on Independence Day, may reinforce the Secretary General's plea for recognition of this nation.

Israel certainly will not be wiped out easily and this fact should give pause to its neighbors.

Receives Advertising Award

By Fay Profilet

MRS. NORRIE PASSINO has been named the St. Louis Advertising Woman of the Year and as the nominee of the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis she will compete for the national Advertising Woman of the Year award. The announcement was made yesterday by Mrs. Henrietta Baker, president of the St. Louis Women's Advertising Club.

Mrs. Passino, art director for Famous-Barr Co., is a past president of the local advertising club and was selected for the honor after the club asked for nominations from St. Louisans who are members of the advertising profession. A committee, headed by Miss Edna Carroll, selected three candidates from the nominees and presented the names to the judges for the final selection.

Basis for the award was: Innovation of new concepts or practices in advertising; helping to raise advertising standards; development of others interested in advertising as a profession; professional recognition of the candidate, and contributions to the business and civic life of the community.

Mrs. Passino, who lives at 7850 Stanford avenue, University City, was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and studied art at the Pratt Institute, New York, after which she worked for Gimbel's in Pittsburgh. She came to Famous-Barr as art director in 1932 and since that time the art department staff has increased from eight to 27 members.

The nominee was president of the Women's Advertising Club for two terms in 1945 and in 1946. She is a charter member and former director of the St. Louis Fashion Group and is a 20-year member of Zonta International. Mrs. Passino originated the Erma Fretz National Award presented by the club for 10 successive years to women for excellence in various phases of advertising. She was also a recipient of that award for creative advertising art and received the first award for design and craftsmanship in 1939 in the Devoe Annual Silk Screen competition.

As chairman of the Women's Advertising Club group dinner in 1941, Mrs. Passino and her committee established the precedent for contributing the net proceeds of that affair to charity, which in that year was "British Aid for Britain," through the British Allied Relief. She has also served as chairman of the committee on programs for two St. Louis Symphonies of Fashion; general chairman of the 1949 international dinner for Czechoslovakian relief; organizer and chairman for the first annual card party for the benefit of the Carmelite monastery in St. Louis, in 1951, the proceeds amounting to $30,000.

The judges who selected Mrs. Passino were: Franklin J. Cornwell, director of advertising, Monsanto Chemical Co.; Sam

OPINION

Dear Martha:

WE are three members of a small neighborhood bridge club. There are eight of us, seven of us are married and the eighth is a sister of one of the members. She has never been married but has stayed at home to care for an invalid mother. She is a good person, Martha, and we like her, but she is always talking about some beau she used to have years ago or how the man next door looked at her as though he might be interested in her. She's fairly attractive but certainly is no Miss America, and yet you'd think she was the most popular person in the block. How can we get her out of this habit? Everyone is sick of hearing her talk.

THREE MEMBERS.

I can understand how you feel, but think a moment. Aren't you and the other married women in the group constantly referring to your husbands and your children? She only is expressing a natural longing to appear as popular as the rest. She wants you to know—as every woman in the world does—that even though she didn't marry she had her chances and that someone sometime took an interest in her. It's a sign of immaturity, to be sure, but most of us are immature to some extent. Another member of your group may gossip or lose her temper or sulk if she doesn't win. And those are certainly signs of juvenile behavior. Try not to be impatient with her but understand her anxiety to be popular too. You don't have to cater to her to be pleasant and polite, but you can watch the group's conversation so that she won't feel that she is different and in that way she may not find it necessary to brag about her romances.

Dear Martha:

WE ARE YOUNG CAREER GIRLS who do not drink or smoke. Our problem is, what should we do on an evening out when everyone else in the party is drinking? They do not argue or belittle us when we refuse but we always have a feeling that we more or less put a damper on the evening. Should we order on drink to be sociable or continue to refuse politely? JUST WONDERING.

Why compromise? If you don't want to drink, don't. They seemingly respect your wishes so don't let yourselves be so sensitive and look for something that isn't there. If they didn't want you along, even though you don't care to drink, they wouldn't ask you. Naturally, if they become rowdy or objectionable, you wouldn't enjoy their company and probably would prefer your own group of non-drinkers. But if they know how to behave, you certainly need not show that you disapprove of their drinking. On the other hand, don't let them force you to do something you don't care to do.

IN ANSWER TO Beverly: Since your own mother is not living and your stepmother has reared you, her name should certainly be with your father's on your wedding invitations. They would read, "Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Blank request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Beverly..."

For young adults who want to meet congenial friends, Martha Carr has compiled a list of clubs and will mail it on request. Please inclose a stamp, a self-addressed envelope.

What a Man Expects

By Ruth Millett

WHEN a man marries he expects: That he will have a companion whose moods will fit comfortably with his own. If he wants to talk, he'll have someone to talk to. If he wants to go out, he'll have a ready companion. If he wants to play, his companion will hold her tongue.

RUTH MILLETT does her homemaking.

That he will have someone to praise him when he does well and to console him when things go wrong.

That in the evening he will come home to a real welcome and that once he is in his home he can relax and be himself.

That his wife will help him find a place in the community and that she will get along with neighbors, his business associates and in all ways be a credit to him.

That there will be laughter in his house—and kindness and good will.

That, together, he and his wife will be able to meet anything that life offers.

That his wife will always be on his side no matter who else may be against him.

That he will always know that someone cares what happens to him.

Married life won't always be what a man expects any more than it is always what a woman hoped for. But it is well, now and then, for a woman to remember what a man expected out of marriage.

And it is well, also for a man to remember how, before marriage, his wife talked of what their life together would be like.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

READER tells me: "A neighbor of mine who is a very highly educated person has a habit of correcting me whenever I mispronounce a word or make a grammatical error. I know I don't speak perfect English, but I resent her doing this very much when she does it in the presence of others. I have not said anything to her about this before because I did not want to hurt her feelings, but it has come to a point where I can't stand it any longer. Will you please tell me how I can tactfully handle this situation?"

Tell her frankly exactly what you have told me and tell her that you appreciate her kind intention when you are alone with her but that it makes you very unhappy to be criticized before others—who left to themselves would not know how often you make mistakes.

DEAR MRS. POST: My mother passed away quite suddenly three weeks ago. My husband's company is giving a dinner for the employees and their wives next month. We had planned on going to this dinner, but now that my mother has died I think it would be improper for us to go. What is your opinion?

Answer: If it is a personal pleasure you would not go. But if it is to your husband's advantage to be present at this dinner, you would put aside your personal feelings and go.

Beige for Grace Kelly's Trousseau

She and Margaret Truman Both Favor That Shade; New Wardrobe Described

TWO-TONED CHECKED SILK GINGHAM SHIRTWAIST DRESS DESIGNED BY MOLLIE PARNIS FOR GRACE KELLY'S TROUSSEAU HAS BOW TIE AND FULL, GATHERED SLEEVES.

BEIGE WORSTED SUIT BY BEN ZUCKERMAN HAS SLIM SKIRT AND FITTED JACKET BELTED IN NORFOLK STYLE.

CHECKED SILK GINGHAM DRESS DECORATED WITH CUT-OUT GARLANDS OF WHITE ORGANDY HAS FULL SKIRT AND LOW, ROUND NECKLINE.

By Sylvia Stiles

WHETHER the trousseau is that of a movie star soon to be a princess or that of an ex-President's daughter, beige is the popular shade.

Following soon after the news that Margaret Truman had chosen beige for her wedding dress and undoubtedly will repeat the hue in other costumes, comes the announcement that costume after costume in the elaborate trousseau of Grace Kelly is in the same pale neutral tone. Blonde coloring, in each case, is responsible for the favoritism of blonde fashions.

Pale tones of beige from off-white, to amber predominate in the collection chosen by Prince Rainier's bride. Two pale beige wool suits by Ben Zuckerman are typical of the selections.

One of these is of sheer tapestry tweed with long V-necked semi-fitted jacket and full pleated skirt. The other, which is sketched, is a version of the Norfolk style. Three beige sports coats, one by the same designer, of natural cashmere; a finger tip length wide-wale corduroy by Marquise, and a full length beige silk linen coat by Helen Rose are included.

The attractiveness of brown with beige is noted in a brown broadtail choir boy jacket with a narrow shawl collar of amber colored mink. Luxurious, too, is a wrapped leopard coat.

Pauline Trigere designed for Miss Kelly a brown and white wrap printed taffeta jacket dress with a parapet hipline band. Branell contributed a summer street costume of brown and white cotton midline and a clay beige silk linen sheath with box jacket. Shades of blue, ranging from sky to sapphire, provide the accent for the cool-looking, neutral beige backgrounds. Turquoise is highlighted.

Any women lucky enough to have a slim, willowy figure like the movie star and wanting to "copy" her clothes may be interested to know that she gives the wide and narrow silhouette equal recognition, likes linen for active sport wear, and has an abundance of silk in her wardrobe.

The Little Woman Complications With a Color Camera

By Clarissa Start

FOREIGNERS must be convinced that photography, not baseball, is the No. 1 American hobby, at least judging from the amount of cameras, films, and photo equipment every world traveler packs along. On my recent jaunt to Germany, I took 150 color slides, 36 black-and-whites, and I was one of the least active photographers.

Clarissa Start.

One man took 500 pictures and bought two $110 cameras. One woman had trouble juggling her miniature camera, her color camera, and her movie camera. But none of us went at this picture taking with the thoroughness of the Harlan Dickeyes on their world tour last fall.

Marion (Mrs. Harlan) Dickey, owner of the St. Louis Hostess Co., sat next to me at a recent dinner and regaled me with tales of their photographic woes. The Dickeyes were part of a CBI Pilgrimage to India, a group of veterans and their wives who returned to the wartime theater 10 years to the day they'd left it. Marion and Harlan felt the pilgrimage should be properly commemorated on color movie film.

we ran around trying to find others on the tour who weren't overweight in luggage and talking them into packing our film.

"We still had film left over so I put it in a plastic bag which we called 'baby' and I carried 'baby' tenderly all over the world, pretending it was filled with important documents. I couldn't let out of my hands."

THEIR FIRST overseas stop was Shannon, Ireland, where a gift shop features duty free merchandise at tempting prices. Marion found Harlan standing in front of a case filled with his film, priced $1 a roll cheaper. She thought she heard him muttering, "Emulsion-schmulsion."

They sent some film back from Paris but in Rome they were warned not to mail it; postal authorities would open it and expose it. In Greece, they were told the same, in Cairo, the same. They kept carrying the film. By this time the others on the tour helping them carry it kept asking wistfully each day how much footage they'd shot.

"When we got to Bombay," Marion continues, "we had 10 packs exposed and we were finally able to ship it back. Shipping charges: $2 a pack. From Tokyo we sent $2 more, at $37."

THE DICKEYS haven't estimated how much their pictures cost per shot but they were pleased artistically with them.

"Harlan took one of the golden Buddhas in Bangkok that just takes my breath away every time I see it," Marion says. Partly because she keeps thinking that not only the Buddha but the film was made of gold.

Secrets of Charm

Misunderstood Feeling

THERE'S one sure way to spoil every chance you have to be charming. Just convince yourself that nobody understands you and keep this unhappy thought firmly in mind. Such an attitude makes impossible the warm, gracious outgoing qualities that are the basis of charm.

Not everyone you meet will understand you—there are too many kinds of people in the world. And there's nothing to worry about if a misunderstood feeling is infrequent and fleeting. But if it begins to overshadow your life, watch out. You're taking a lone and hostile position that's sure to make everybody leave you alone.

IF THERE IS a time when you feel at odds with the world—or worse still, that the world is at odds with you—you can be sure you're thinking about yourself too much. That's just the time to pull up short and ask questions. If I'm misunderstood, is it because I have so little understanding of others?

The business associate who always seems to be critical or to put stumbling blocks in your way—have you ever given any real thought to how difficult his job may be or how your whole-hearted co-operation is needed? The friend of a friend who seems disinterested in you—did you show enough interest in her to give her reason to like you?

SWITCH THE DIAL of your own thinking away from the home station and tune it to the thinking of just one other person for a beginning.

Start a tactful but leading conversation that shows interest on your part and see if a simple overture like this isn't more promising than you had any idea it could be. A continued, graceful show of interest will surely bring out an interest in you.

There's a great deal of satisfaction in overcoming the obstacles that stand in the way of two persons' understanding of each other, and it's so often unexpectedly easy to do.

Your Most Attractive Voice. You can achieve an appealing voice—a vibrant attribute to charm and success—by reading "YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE," which gives complete instructions on how to overcome wearisome speaking qualities as tonelessness and dullness. ## Why "THAT IVORY LOOK" means a prosperous look for St. Louis!

Because so many women want "That Ivory Look," this famous soap, made at the Procter & Gamble factory here in St. Louis grows more and more successful, year after year. And every bar, every carload that's shipped to serve throughout this part of the country leaves a little "extra something" for St. Louis—better jobs, better living, greater prosperity for the community as a whole. Since the success of every P&G product is reflected everywhere in town, Procter & Gamble is working full time to help make these benefits even greater as the years go on.

Better Business!

Most of the dollars that Ivory brings to St. Louis in P & G payroll and plant-operating expenditures are quickly passed on to local business. Whenever possible Procter & Gamble buys the supplies and services it needs right here in town.

Better Jobs!

Employees at Procter & Gamble are able to help make better jobs for others because they enjoy unusually steady jobs themselves—are year-round customers for local business of all kinds. Procter & Gamble's famous employment plan guarantees eligible employees 48 weeks' work each year—in addition to profit-sharing and pension benefits.

Better Living!

Tax money paid by P & G and other leading local industries benefits the entire community. It helps provide safer streets, better schools and parks. P & G people like it this way. In fact, many of them work as private citizens for the betterment of St. Louis. For this is, after all, their home town, too.

When Mississippi had NEGRO Senators

Amazing as it might seem today, Mississippi elected the only two Negroes ever to serve in the United States Senate! They were Senator Hiram Rhodes Revels, 1870, and Senator Blanche Kelso Bruce, 1874. These two Negro Senators did much to promote peace and understanding between the races during those troubled postwar times. ON the shore of the Bay of Biscay, in northern Spain, is the seaport of Santander.
Within easy range of the old city are the caves of Altamira (pronounced ALL-tah-ME-rah).

Seventy-seven years ago a Spaniard who was interested in caves took his small daughter into one of those at Altamira.
Suddenly she shouted Spanish words meaning, "Bulls! Bulls!"

The father wondered where the bulls were—until he caught sight of paintings of animals on the walls and low ceiling of the cave. The animals were bison, which are classed as members of the cattle family. It was natural for the sharp-eyed child to speak of them as bulls, since she never had seen a bison in real life.

THAT EVENT has special importance because it was the first time on record that modern people saw pictures made by Stone Age artists.

For a time there was a widespread belief that the paintings were the work of artists of the past century who had gone into that cave and used brushes to paint pictures.

As time passed, however, pictures were found scratched and painted on the walls of other

SKETCHES were found of animals which Europeans of the past century never had seen alive. Such animals included the mammoth and the woolly rhinoceros. The mammoth was shown as a beast with the shape
